Letters

Letters to the editor are welcome. While there is no limit on the number of words, please write only enough material to adequately cover the subject. Anonymous letters are not acceptable, although names may be withheld on request.

Dear Editor:

May I share with you and your readers of the Pine Cone my gratitude for the exciting and valuable experience gained through attending the Summer Music Institute given by Istvan Nadas, as I find it to be another feather in Carmel's cultural cap.

In the first hour of the class, through his scholarly research and knowledge into the lives of the composers, his keen perception made them come alive, bringing to our attention the impact of the cultural and political climate in which they lived. Also he enlightened us with references to their contemporaries in the other arts--such as painters, poets, and writers.

In the second hour we were treated to his mastery of the piano, demonstrated by playing the works of the before discussed composer. These were recitals in themselves performed at "concert pitch."

Nadas' dedication to music seems limitless and his enthusiasm contagious. How truly generous to share such gifts with us.

His talent as a teacher was evidenced by a student of his -- David Warick -- when he played Ravel's Gaspard de la Nuit. David received a well-deserved standing ovation.

I regret this rich event ended all too soon, but now look forward to his return in 1976.

Dear Editor:

"Try to put yourself in another person's shoes" is a saying, of various versions, that has become popular. I ask all with cars to exercise the imagination and picture what life would be for them without their cars? How would they make out in their daily life? Of course I mean if public transportation was not around?

Would it put a crimp in their shopping? In their social life? In their visits to doctor, dentist, hospital? How would they get to work or to their business? Could they attend community events and places of entertainment? Would a feeling of "being "shut off from the world," being isolated in a community, possess them? Would a sense of despair gradually sadden their hearts?

All this is a prelude to a point I must make. I want to shower praise on the Monterey Peninsula Joint Powers Agency. It took over a seemingly hopeless situation. It began to operate the busses when private enterprise threw up its hands in despair and called it quits. And in the short time Joint Powers Agency shouldered the responsibility, more and more passengers have been using it!

Young and old, and in-between-of-age, without cars (as well as some with cars who got wise) are riding the public bus system. People are smiling again -- those previously stranded, who have no cars or cannot drive but, now are able to go places, see things, do things. The whole peninsula is their "stamping ground" as they travel to Carmel, Monterey, Seaside, Marina, Ft. Ord, Del Rey Oaks, Pacific Grove, Sand City, etc.

I am sure that this letter voices the sentiments not only of one member of the human race residing on the peninsula, but of many grateful souls. Thanks Joint Powers Agency for an excellent beginning! You, and I, and all concerned folks know that much more remains to be done by county, state, and Federal governments to make public transportation available everywhere to help lick the energy shortage and give Americans a public transportation system worthy of the leading industrial nation in the world.

It will be pollution free, low in fare, comfortable convenient to every community of our nation, reliable, attractive and very safe. It will clean up the land from too much asphalt, debris, and lop-sided dependency on the private automobile. Our country will become more attractive, and countless lives will be saved.

Dear Editor:

I doubt that our nation could survive another Nixon type administration. I believe it is high time we take a cold, realistic look at somehow upgrading the moral quality of our public officials.

As pertains to Presidents and their aides I suggest the following: have all presidential and vice presidential candidates closely examined by a board of competent psychiatrists to weed out misfits and paranoids before primary elections.

Have all hiring of White House aides, and cabinet members done by a neutral, non-partisan outside agency on the basis of intelligence, honesty and patriotism, so as to avoid their selection by a President seeking such qualities, for example, as dishonesty and blind allegiance to some existing or contemplated warped political philosophy.

Discontinue the total idiocy of allowing Presidents to select their Vice Presidents. One Nixon-Agnew combination was enough to last a lifetime. And above all, let us pray that someday we will get a chance in a Presidential election to vote for the better of two reasonably good candidates, instead of always having to choose between the lesser of two evils.

Dear Editor:

My wife and I would like to thank the Carmel library for providing something for young people. Their Tuesday programs have been really good. They are to be congratulated on recognizing a need and meeting it.

Apartment conversion needs scrutiny

(Editorial)

THE CARMEL Planning Commission will hold a public hearing Aug. 21 on the conversion of apartments to condominiums, an issue which vitally affects the present and future character of Carmel.

At issue is whether the planning commission should allow the unlimited proliferation of condominium units, and whether the planners should attempt to control their conversion from apartments, and under what conditions.

The planning commission voted two weeks ago to allow Robert Stean and Ralph Stevens to convert 12 apartment units now under construction on Mission Street between 4th and 5th to condominium units. The split 4-to-3 vote was indicative of the lack of consensus among planners on the issue.

As Dorothea Roberts, chairwoman of the planning commission pointed out at that meeting, the question is "very land would be required fo. every apartment, instead of the 1,000 sq. ft. normally required under the city's subdivision ordinance.
Carmel.

In the case of the Stean-Stevens proposal, the developers had been given a use permit for construction of the apartment units a year ago with the stipulation that 667 sq. ft. of land would be required for every apartment, instead of the 1,000 sq. ft. normally required for every apartment, instead of the 1,000 sq. ft. normally required under the city's subdivision ordinance.

City councilwoman Florence Josselyn had expressed the justifiable concern that approval of the proposal would set a precedent for a reduced 667 sq. ft. requirement for condominium development, and thus throw the door open to more and more condominiums.

THERE ARE arguments in favor of and against the conversion of apartments to condominiums. One of the reasons for allowing apartment buildings to be constructed on 667 sq. ft. was to encourage the maintenance of the residential district in the face of encroachment by the business district.

To this extent, the relaxed requirement for apartments is, as Planning Director Robert Griggs pointed out recently, probably preferable to more businesses. At the same time, if this 667 sq. ft. requirement is allowed to be the standard for the construction of condominiums, there could well be a proliferation of condominiums instead of apartments, since the former are cheaper to construct and more lucrative than the latter.

The question then becomes one of the desirability of condominiums over apartments, in terms of the availability of rental units in Carmel. That question also relates to the general makeup of Carmel's population, since the rental units afforded by apartments, if displaced by condominiums, could make it even more difficult for younger families to live in Carmel.

In favor of condominiums, one could mention the "pride of ownership," which was invoked by counsel for Stean and Stevens at the last planning commission meeting. Here again, the question intrudes itself as to whether the pride of ownership of more and more of Carmel's available housing space will become limited to fewer and fewer people.

These and related questions must be carefully weighed by both the planning commission and city council before the go-ahead is given to more apartment-to-condominium conversions.

Sanitary district tax rate continues unchanged

THE CARMEL Sanitary District has approved a tax rate of 30 cents per $100 of assessed property valuation for the current fiscal year. The tax rate, which was approved last Monday night by the district board of directors, is the same as last year's.

Eben Whittlesey, attorney for the district, told members of the board the total assessed value of property within the district, according to county figures, is $74,626,420. Under the approved rate, a total of $228,000 will be raised to boost the districts' revenues already dedicated to various projects and operating expenditures.

The tax rate resolution listed a figure of $387,700 for total operating expenditures, which include salaries, employee benefits, and maintenance of the district plant. Among the major projects to which money has been pledged for the current fiscal year are construction of a new digester and control building at the plant, which will cost about $400,000, modifications on the three digesters at the plant ($78,000), and enlargement of the plant's drying beds ($10,000).

There was a great deal of discussion at Tuesday's meeting regarding the present status of the eastern portion of the Odello artichoke fields, and the prospect of acquiring that land as a site for waste treatment. The board agreed to pay a total of $6,000 to the Odellos for use of 40 acres of that land which are currently being utilized by the district's engineers as a test plot.

Kennedy Engineers have been conducting tests on the eastern portion of the Odello land for several months. Their testing procedures are intended to assess the feasibility of utilizing the land as a site for treatment of secondary effluent from the district plant.

Bruno Odello testified before the board that the original understanding of his family was that only a few acres would be required for the testing procedure. Since the tests were begun, he explained, restrictions imposed by the state health department have required temporary abandonment of a wide area of land around the test plot, enlarging the area devoted to the project to 40 acres.

In view of what he described as "a great deal of inconvenience" for his family, Odello asked the board to pay $150 per acre rent on the land currently being used for their testing program on a bi-yearly basis. Odello said his family was paying $172 in taxes on each acre of their land, and in his view the rental price requested is "nominal, and only fair."

THE RENTAL agreement, which was approved unanimously despite board member Earl Moser's initial response that the rate "seemed a bit high," stipulates that the board will pay rental for use of the 40-acre plot for a six month period between June 1 and Dec. 31 of this year. The testing procedure on the land is expected to be completed by November.

Odello also urged the board to "do everything possible" to speed up its testing procedure and reach a decision on the proposed purchase of the land. "You are coming to a hard and fast dateline," he said. "Very soon you are going to have to bite the bullet and make up your minds on our property."

Carmel Mayor Bernard Anderson, present as a member of the audience, expressed agreement with Odello's statements.

"The Odellos have obviously been very cooperative, and I think this rental agreement is a step in the right direction. I hope you gentleman will move as quickly as possible to reach a decision on this matter of acquiring the eastern tract," he said.

Also present was Gary Tate, engineer for the Monterey Peninsula Regional Parks District, who joined Anderson and Odello in urging the board to proceed as quickly as possible in reaching a decision on acquisition of the artichoke field.

District engineer David Kennedy presented a third progress report on the testing program on the Odello land. The report, while giving no definite conclusions regarding the feasibility of establishing a land treatment facility on the Odello property, does indicate that the land is capable of taking the full present output of effluent from the plant.

The report estimates the effluent infiltration capacity for the eastern portion of the Odello land to be "at least 4 million gallons per day."

While members of the board seemed to agree that the latest finds are encouraging, Moser and Kennedy expressed concern about the capacity of land to absorb the nitrates and other chemical substances present in the effluent.

In other action:

--The board authorized Kennedy Engineers to begin the procedure of filing an environmental impact report and compiling drawings for installation of a new digester at the district plant.

--An environmental impact report was accepted by the board on its proposal to enlarge the drying beds at the treatment plant.

--Board member Don Kirk was authorized to draw up a revision of the district's ordinance concerning the authority of board members to involve themselves in the management of the treatment plant.

Concern had been expressed at recent meetings that board members had given orders to plant manager Max Drewein regarding the operation of equipment at the plant. Kirk's revised ordinance will be discussed at the next meeting of the board.

School board considers override tax for district

The Carmel Unified School District's Board of Supervisors met Monday in a study session at the central office conference room to discuss a 43 cent permissive over-ride tax for the school district, in order to battle the district's rising inflation rates.

Prior to 1973, all school districts in California applied a tax rate against the assessed valuation of the district to determine income. If either the tax rate or the amount of assessed valuation of the district were increased, the district's income increased in proportion to the increase. Thus, if the tax rate remained constant and the assessed valuation increased by 10 per cent, the district would have essentially a 10 per cent increase in its budget.

Now, under the provisions of Senate Bill (SB) 90 and Assembly Bill (AB) 1267, the method of determining district income has changed radically, according to a fact sheet prepared by the school board.

Now, instead of the old rate, the average allowable income per pupil, as determined from the prior school year and adjusted by an inflation factor, is multiplied by the estimated total average daily attendance of pupils enrolled, in order to fix the amount of money available to the district. A tax rate is then established to yield the allowable funds. The inflation factor is included in the legislation and is determined by a complicated formula. This year (1974-1975) the district was allowed to increase its budget by 2.7 per cent, while the costs of goods and services increased by over ten per cent, according to the fact sheet.

"If the costs of goods and services is up ten per cent and we get a 2.7 per cent increase," said Harris Taylor, "something in the school district will have to go."

According to the district's fact sheet, between the fiscal years 1975-76 and 1979-80, without the additional voted tax override, there will be between a 90 cent and 97 cent tax reduction for the operation of the Carmel Unified School District.

The 43 cent permissive override tax would allow the district 27 cents for operational costs for the fiscal year 1975-1976 and 1976-1977; the tax would also establish 16-cent tax to rehabilitate Carmel High School.

These decreases are based on the following data:

An annual increase of 8 per cent in the unsecured assessed valuation.

--An annual increase of 12 per cent in the secured assessed valuation.

--A declining average daily attendance from 3,160 in 1975-76 to 2,824 in 1979-80.

--An 8 per cent inflationary adjustment to the 1975-76 and 1976-77 budgets.

--A slight inflationary adjustment for the school district's budget as part of the SB 90 formula.

--Revenue limits to increase by a range of $35.50 in 1975-76 to a maximum of $39.42 per unit of average daily attendance in 1979-80.

The tax rate decreases mentioned simply will not permit the Carmel Unified School District to maintain the present program, according to the district's fact sheet.

Under the Jefferson ruling, the State of California had to come up with a program that would spend only $100 difference between all school spending in California schools within the next six years and that is directly linked to the fact that this district isn't receiving the necessary cost of living increases to maintain the district, board members indicated.

Carmel Unified School District is in the top 10 per cent of "quality schools."

"We want to cover the district for the next two years," Taylor said, "and hopefully the state will see that the ruling is unfair, and it'll do something about it."

But California may close the gap to the override system for all state school districts. The Dills bill in the senate may close the "loophole" of the tax override elections, and force all school districts to "stick it out" under the Jefferson ruling.

If passed, the Dills bill would no longer permit tax override elections anywhere in California.

The Dills bill was up for a vote in the senate last Monday.

"If we can't get this tax override," Taylor said, "we may have to start dismantling the school district."

Photography history workshop

The Ansel Adams Gallery in Yosemite National Park announces a workshop on "The History of Photography" from Sept. 1-6. The workshop will be an advanced study of the evolution of photography.

Beginning with the earliest images and ideas in photography, the workshop will progress toward a careful consideration of the most recent trends in creative photography. The workshop will be of a seminar nature with slide lectures and open discussions.

The staff for the workshop includes Peter Bunnell and Norman Locks. Peter Bunnell is the Director of the Art Museum and McAlpin Professor of the History of Photography at Princeton University. Norman Locks is the Workshop Director for the Ansel Adams Gallery.

The workshop is $200. Enrollment will be limited to fifteen students and acceptance will be on a first-come, first-serve basis.

All correspondence should be directed to the Ansel Adams Gallery Workshops, Box 455, Yosemite National Park, 95389.

Mini-courses to take students on history tour

Gentrain, an interdisciplinary general education program in western civilizations, will make its debut at Monterey Peninsula College this fall with eight courses lasting two weeks in length.

Philip C. Nash, associate dean of instruction and creator of the Gentrain concept, said "the uniqueness of the program lies in the drop-in, drop-out concept which allows students to come aboard the train of mini-courses at the beginning of any two-week unit and stay for as long as they wish."

About 300 student "passengers" are expected to participate in the Gentrain program each semester and "we will probably have an extremely heterogeneous type of student, ranging in age from 17 to 70, and most varied in scholastic background and interest."

Another facet of the program is that it will draw outside experts from various fields who will present guest lectures.

Some of the program lectures will include Ross Durfee who will make a number of dramatic presentations; Arpajolu, who will lecture on Greek classicism, Ralph Atkinson, a former MPC trustee, who will lecture on technology, John Boit Morse, on art and Richard Kezerian, on modern British history.

The day-to-day operation of Gentrain will be operated by four "conductors" or faculty members from various field disciplines who will be responsible for delivering the course material and supervising the small group discussion sections.

Students can earn one unit of credit for the successful completion of each unit of the program and may earn up to 16 units of humanities credit which will meet their general education requirements at MPC and at most colleges offering bachelor degree programs.

The core of the Gentrain program will be the humanities and political sciences, and will be augmented by such other fields of study as art, philosophy and religion, literature, drama and music. Nash said the planning and development of the program has taken more than three years.

"The major concept of the program is that rather than have students enroll in traditional three-unit humanities courses for an entire semester, we would build a 'train' of courses which meet four hours a day for two days each week," Nash explained.

The train of courses is "time-bound" and departs each September from the "origin of man" and arrives at "contemporary affairs" each June.

Know your county government

By WILLARD BRANSON
Fifth District Supervisor

Another one of the departments in the county government is the Department of Public Health. Its basic function is to protect, maintain, and improve the health of the citizens of Monterey County. With a staff of about 170 persons and a budget of approximately $5 million annually, the Health Department is concerned with the prevention and control of disease and with the protection of our community from disease.

A look at certain of the major programs of the health department will show how this department executes its preventive health functions.

The immunization program is designed to reduce the incidence of communicable disease by providing immunizations and encouraging public participation. The health department offers immunizations for polio, small pox, typhoid, measles, diptheria, whooping cough and cholera. All these diseases are under an acceptable level of control at the moment, but they have not been erradicated. All of us should keep our immunizations up to date -- particularly children.

The objective of the environmental health program is to identify and erradicate environmental health hazards. This is the work of health department sanitarians who enforce environmental health laws and legally established standards through inspections and investigations, and issuance of permits, when appropriate. The sanitarians are concerned with water supplies, restaurants, bakeries, food stores, swimming pools, public beaches, pet shops, milk supplies, and solid and liquid waste disposal.

The veneral disease control program was instituted in an effort to reduce the number of new cases of veneral disease, and the health department carries out an active program of case finding, diagnosis, and treatment in regularly scheduled clinics. Persons known to have been exposed to the disease are encouraged to consult their private physicians or to visit one of the veneral disease clinics conducted by the health department.

CLINIC DIAGNOSIS and treatment is provided to patients in the strictest of confidence. In its public education programs, the health department seeks to develop public awareness of the prevalence of the disease, of its symptoms, and of ways to guard against it.

One of the health department's largest programs is the family planning program. The purpose is to make family planning services available to women throughout the county so that each may choose when and if she wishes to have a child.

The basic objective is to reduce the number of unwanted preganancies. Twenty-nine family planning clinics are conducted each month by the health department at locations throughout the county where birth control information, services, and supplies are available to anyone who wishes to take advantage of these services.

Another of the health department's major programs is mental health services. The function of the program is to assist those with mental, emotional, and socio-behavioral problems.

To provide for these needs, the county's mental health services program offers a comprehensive range of treatment facilities, including out-patient clinics; a day treatment center for patients who do not require 24-hour a day treatment, supervision, and care; short-term in-patient care at two of the hospitals in the county; and long-term care in state hospitals.

Certain of these services are provided by the Natividad Medical Center in Salinas and by the Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula through contract with the health department and the county.

As a part of the mental health services program, the director of health services also serves as the public conservator for more than 100 persons who have been determined by the courts to be gravely ill and unable to care for themselves.

–To be concluded next week.

Testament for tomorrow

By GUNNAR NORBERG
Carmel City Councilman

It is high time the State Supreme Court came to terms with the overwhelmingly voted Prop. 20 which had as its primary purpose the saving of what remained of the state's coastline for the benefit of today's generation and for generations still unborn. Last week the State Supreme Court did come to terms with it, and rules that private developers could not sue the California Coastal Commission for damages on the basis of what seems to me a dubiously claimed "vested right."

As more and more people have populated the country and the coastal areas of the country, developers of all sorts have tried to use the general population growth as a kind of magic "open sesame" to permit them to desecreate the land for their own individual or corporate gain.

It is time now, and it has been time for a good many years, to make it clear to developers that they have no God-given or man-given right to do anything to destroy the environment which they necessarily share with thousands and sometimes with millions--of other citizens.

There is only just so much coastline in California, in the United States, and in the world. If, because of lack of effective governmental intervention, it were all to be developed for the advantage solely of individuals and corporations whose only motive for development happened to be profit-seeking, then citizens generally of this state, and of the country, would only become the poorer.

It was something called Veta Company of Orange County which had sued the State Coastal Commission for more than $23.5 million because it had not been able to acquire the building permits needed to proceed with its mammoth development.

Many times during the three terms that I have been a member of the Carmel City Council, attorneys representing entrepreneurs of one kind or another have said they and their clients would sue city government for millions of dollars if city council members were to take this-or-that stand with regard to some zoning or planning matter, even though those same attorneys knew city councils had full and complete authority to do the zoning and planning to which specified entrepreneurs objected.

Last week's unanimous State Supreme Court decision held that state law protects governmental entities from any damages private developers might claim through denial to them of required building permits.

The State Supreme Court further held that any coastal commission freeze against the issuance of building permits, could not be considered grounds for what developers frequently call "inverse condemnation."

What is "inverse condemnation"? That means that a land owner or a developer says that a governing body is inhibiting him from doing what he wants to do with his land, without at the same time paying him for what he considers his land's worth in the future from the kind of development which he originally contemplated.

There are all kinds of hypothetical gymnastics through which lawyers for developers go, simply to develop the thesis that their clients are deprived of some kind of inherent right just because governmental bodies such as coastal commissions deny them permits for the kinds of development they may, at any given moment, seek to start.

Through the centuries, rulers of all sorts have claimed the full right to do what they pleased with any land under their respective sovereignities.

In recent times, there have, of course, been more and more governments based upon the right of the governed to have a say in the impact which governmental action can have upon the governed. But, even so, most state constitutions have said essentially that all land within their boundaries is held by everyone "subject to the requirements of the state." Usually the implications in this sort of statement are that the state, or local governments acting by means of state delegated authority, must compensate private property owners adequately for land which they take, usually through eminent domain procedures.

I BELIEVE it is time now for property owners to recognize, in the case of very limited coastal areas, that a public requirement can validly, in certain critical cases, override any so-called private-property right. When coastal land is sacrificed to intensive development, it is not only the present generation which loses, but also unnumbered generations still unborn.

I also believe it is time for persons who hold elective office in cities and in counties to recognize that they do actually represent the entire electorate from which they have been chosen to act as plenipotentiary representatives. For this reason, they should not allow themselves either to be intimidated or inhibited from acting in what they would consider to be the best public interest, just because lawyers representing private clients,sometimes threaten them and their respective governments with multi-million-dollar suits if they should dare to deter those private developers from a particular type of public desecration which those developers have in mind.

I must also point out that those elected representatives--whether at the city level or the county level sometimes feel as if they were alone, and that their respective electorates actually do not care, or do not care enough, just what they, their elected representatives, do. It is when this kind of feeling really begins to take hold in the minds of city councilmen or county supervisors, that the public good is most endangered.

And it is because of this peril that citizens generally should start to take more interest in what their respective representatives do. Only by this means can these representatives actually begin to accept individually and personally that there really are people--lots of them--who care and are vitally concerned.

After that much has been said, it is also important to make still another point. This point has to do with the quality of candidates who seek local office, and the quality of candidates frequently is determined by the degree of interest, or of disinterest, which the public generally takes in the particular local government for which those candidates seek election. Because of this, it is enormously important for an ever-increasing proportion of the electorate to take some continuing interest in government, not just at campaign times but also at the important times between campaigns.

As population increases, and as more and more people must live closer together, it is imperative, if more democratic government is to survive in America, that more and more people take a greater and greater part in decisions which affect not only them and their generations, but also a distant posterity.

If this kind of attention grows and develops, then not only the coastal areas of the state of California but also the rest of this great country, will have something precious to convey to tomorrow's and to distant tomorrow's generations. And helping to empower today's generation to prepare for tomorrow's, are decisions such as last week's unanimous State Supreme Court decision.

REMEMBER WHEN?

50 YEARS AGO:

From the Pine Cone, Saturday, Aug. 16, 1924

Miss Helen Wright, daughter of Mayor B. F. Wright, was selected to represent Monterey Peninsula's spirit of the Serra Pilgrimage as "Miss Monterey" at the luncheon held at the St. Francisco hotel, San Francisco, yesterday in honor of "Miss California," or Miss Fay Lampier, who was adjudged the most beautiful California girl at the recent Santa Cruz beauty contest.

Friend William Richardson, governor of the sovereign state of California, "enjoyed" several very active days on Monterey Peninsula this week. The affairs in which he took an active part included a review of the national guard troops at Camp Del Monte on Wednesday afternoon, a banquet in his honor given by Monterey's hospitable mayor, Benjamin F. Wright at the Hotel Del Monte in the evening, a Rotarian luncheon on Thursday, and later a motor trip to Salinas.

The concluding performance of the Forest Theater this season took place last Friday and Saturday nights with a picturesque and interesting presentation of "Alice in Wonderland" dramatized by Perry Newberry, and produced by Arthur Cyril.

Due to the fact this is the third time "Alice" has been performed here, the audiences were small, and those who had already seen the play did not get the same thrill out of it as previously.

J. D. Farwell was an interested visitor at Carmel last week. Contrary to the accepted newspaper version of the community, he found that it was an up-to-date townwith paved streets, sidewalks, fire department, bank, and even a newspaper. Newpapers have been in the habit of poking fun at Carmel, giving the impression that it was a freakish community due to the presence of authors who are supposed to have many unique opinions on how a city should be run.--Los Gatos Mail News.

25 YEARS AGO:

From the Pine Cone, Aug. 12, 1949

NO NEW out of district students will be accepted in the Carmel elementary schools from and including kindergarten through the seventh grade. At a meeting to be held tonight at 7:30 o'clock in the board room at the high school the school board will vote to confirm a decision reached last week at an executive meeting. At that time a report of a study on probable enrollment growth in the schools at both elementary and high school level was made. From information furnished in the report, the board came to the conclusion that the facilities at the elementary schools would be taxed to capacity to take care of the district needs and there would not be space for new out of district students, but out of district students already enrolled in the elementary schools will be allowed to continue.

New out of district students will be accepted at the high school for all four high school grades and for the eighth grade.

An ordinance changing the procedure for setting charges for connecting residence sewage facilities with sanitary district sewer lines was passed at the regular meeting of the Carmel Sanitary District Board Monday night. The charge has been $1 per foot. According to the new ordinance, published this issue in the legal section of the Pine Cone, the board will set the charges every six months by resolution.

Earl Wermuth of the Carmel Police Department is boasting his father's hunting prowess this week. His father, Fred Marshall of Watsonville, who will be 90 years old on Sept. 12, got himself a nice big forked horn buck that weighed 122 pounds dressed on Sunday, up Big Sur at 5:40 a.m. When the Modoc season opens he plans to go after a mule tail deer.

10 YEARS AGO:

From the Pine Cone, Aug. 6, 1964

PIERRE SALINGER was seated as the new Senator from California yesterday and his mother, Mrs. Jehanne Carlson of Carmel, was there for the ceremony. Senator Salinger's swearing in was witnessed by a full quota of senators, Republicans and Democrats, plus a contingent of 160 enthusiastic supporters from California, headed by Governor Brown, who had flown to the capital by chartered jet.

Following a public hearing, at which only one taxpayer appeared to protest, the Board of Education of the Carmel Unified School District last night adopted a budget totalling $2,280,462 for the 1964-1965 school year.

The new budget required taxpayers to pay 24 cents more school tax than they did last year. The new school tax rate is $2.57 per $100 of assessed property valuation.

Adeveloper of property in the commercial district shall be required to provide all-day parking off the street for tenants and employees of any business occupying the developed premises is the basis of a report made by a joint committee of the city council and planning commission.

That recent retail and office development, along with the increased area devoted to limited time parking, have forced all day parking for tenants and employees in the residential areas, to the detriment of these areas, was the reason for the study.

Carmel's former mayor and present councilman, Eben Whittlesey, has just returned from New York, where he was the honor guest at the annual meeting of the American Council for the Blind, and also was presented with a scroll naming him the council's Ambassador of the Year.

Three artists exhibit at Peninsula Art Museum

art and artists

Opening this week at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, 559 Pacific St. in Monterey is an exhibition of the works of three women artists of the Los Angeles area. Bernyce Polifka and Lynn Bassler are painters, both native Californians living in Northridge and both working in acrylics. Elena Karina-Canavier was born in Tientsin, China of Russian parents, was raised in Los Angeles and works in porcelain sculpture.

Bernyce Polifka creates brilliant, colorful paintings of the hard edge tradition with a great warmth and vitality. She has had nine one-woman shows, has been in numerous group shows and has worked in many public and private collections in the United States, Sweden and Japan. She and her artist husband, Eugene Fleury, have worked together on several wall murals, art direction and production design for film studios and have designed a children's film for the United Nations. At present she is an instructor at the Art Center College of Design.

Lynn Bassler's paintings, done with acrylic vinyls, are abstract with a rich, subtle color range in a complex pointillistic style. Her work started to appear in important exhibitions while she was still in school She has been exhibiting steadily ever since in museums, universities and private galleries including the Los Angeles County Museum, the California Palace of the Legion of Honor and the Long Beach Museum. She has had one-woman exhibitions at California State University, Los Angeles, the La Jolla Museum of Contemporary Art and Mount San Antonio College in Walnut, Calif.

Elena Karina-Canavier's porcelain sculpture is inspired by the sea. Done in the form of containers, it is reminiscent of tide pools with its sandy surface, intricately carved shapes and pearl glazes. Her work too has been exhibited widely in museums and arts centers such as the Oakland Art Center and the Otis Art Institute. It is in many private and public collections including the Kohler Collection of Contemporary Ceramic Art, the Brand Art Center and the Phoenix Art Museum.

An exhibition of watercolors by Bernard von Eichman, 1899-1970, will be held in the Leonard Heller Memorial Gallery of the Monterey Peninsula Musuem of Art until Sept. 1.

Carmelites appear in 'Company'

Five Carmelites are featured in the Monterey Peninsula College SRO Theater's production of "Company." The play opens at 8:30 p.m. today, and continues Aug. 9, 10, 11, 16, 17, 18, 23, 24, and 25.

The hit Broadway musical comedy will star Stephanie Cunningham as Sarah, David Frydenlund as Harry, Lisa Burroughs as Susan, Pat Terman as Kathy and Joanie Griggs as April.

The play was winner of the New York Drama Critics' Circle Award for the best musical first produced on Broadway by Hal Prince. The production is based on the book by George Furth, with music and lyrics by Stephen Sondheim.

Recent credits for the cast include Stephanie Cunningham in the MPC production of "Hair," and Joanie Griggs and Pat Terman in the SRO Theater production of "The Drunkard."

Frydenlund appeared in the Naval Postgraduate School's production of "The Princess and the Pea" and Lisa Burroughs in Carmel High School's production of "Gypsy."

Reservations for "Company" can be made by calling 375-0455.

McCulloch is appointed

Charles McCulloch of Carmel has been appointed by Monterey County Supervisor Willard Branson to County Service Area 43 for fire protection.

McCulloch was named to fill a vacancy created by the resignation of O. N. Ford.

County Service Area 43 encompasses unincorporated land areas surrounding Carmel and is financed by a special tax rate for that purpose.

Broadhurst exhibits at 'Monk's Loft'

Watercolors by local artist John Broadhurst are being exhibited in the "Monk's Loft" of the California Winery store, located in Carmel Center.

Paintings by Broadhurst were shown in Carmel 10 years ago. At that time a reviewer from Art Forum magazine described him as "A talented artist, but his work is too sweet." Now, according to the 36-year-old artist, the paintings are showing a new maturity.

"It's an exciting period, because my painting is reaching a maturity," said Broadhurst. "I'm doing exclusively watercolors, but they are unusual watercolors. The work is much more vigorous than it was before. The subjects are archetypal and sensual; often Mayan in configuration. They are also large paintings, most of them four feet by four feet."

Broadhurst, who has been painting professionally since receiving a degree in art from San Francisco State College in 1965, has shown his work in galleries throughout the Bay area.

His work will be exhibited in the Winery for an indefinite period of time, with individual paintings changed periodically. He explained that he has established the relatively permanent exhibit because he is "tired of the gallery circuit."

"SEA WITH FLOWERS" is one of the watercolors by Carmel artist Sam Colburn which is on display as a pasrt of the permanent collection at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of art.

Colburn to exhibit at First Federal Bank

A one-man show of paintings and drawings by Sam Colburn, local taxi driver and noted Peninsula artist, will run Aug. 25 through Sept. 6 at the new First Federal Savings Court on Junipero and 6th in Carmel.

The exhibit will be made up of work done by Colburn since he moved to the Peninsula in 1937. Under the theme of "Land and Sea," most of the paintings portray local subject matter.

Colburn explained "for many years I went out three or four times a week into either the Carmel or Salinas Valley's to paint the land and the farms." There will be "farmscapes" involving structures which have unhappily vanished at the approach of the developer.

"My latest work," he continued, "is concerned with surfers, and a nature surrealism involving sea and flower forms.

"Al of these years I have been learning to express meaning through form and feeling. When I look at a hill up in the Carmel Valley, it is the curve of the particular structure that interests me. The same is true when painting or drawing humans. What can I put down about that body that is different from another?

"In this way one avoids stereotypes and symbols without meaning because there is no feeling. Ben Shawn once wrote a book called 'The Shape of Content.' It is probably a good book. I have not read it because I have learned what is in it," he said.

Known to many Carmelites as the taxi driver with the broad-brim hat, Colburn has had a long and varied career. Born in Denver in 1909, he moved with his family to the Los Angeles area at the age of nine. After studying geology at the University of Southern California and University of Colorado, he fled the Depression in 1932 and spent a year in Europe. "Europe was where I discovered art," he said, "in museums."

Upon returning to Los Angeles he began taking art classes and thinking seriously about a career as an artist.

"At that time," he recalls, "a doctor friend of mine persuaded me to invest in an aircraft company in Long Beach. We introduced the Piper Cub to the West Coast, and three years later I sold my interest for a profit of $115.

"The traffic was terrible within the amoeba known as Los Angeles so I headed for that village named Carmel-by-the-Sea."

Colburn came to Carmel in 1937, and has lived in the area ever since. He described his early experiences as a young artist.

"It was an excellent place for the study of art. Among those artists present in the area were Armin Hanse, William Ritschel, Paul Mays, and John O'Shea. I valued their presence, and got particular help from Paul Whitman in watercolor. That medium fascinated me, and so for the past 37 years I have specialized in same. The results have been a justification of life, for me at least. I have long been a strong on empathy, and the shapes on this earth, including those created with man, are really the subject of my artistic discourse."

Over the years he has been honored by one-man exhibits in Carmel, Monterey, Pacific Grove, Santa Barbara, San Francisco, Virginia City, Tucson, Aspen, and New York.

'A Joyous Day' to be given by local ART performers

Actors Repertory Theatre of the Monterey Peninsula will present an original production called "A Joyous Day" at 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday at Monterey Peninsula Theater.

The show is a collective work of song, dance and comedy mime: The format resembles the 1930s era of vaudeville, but with the situations updated to the 1970s.

The troupe dances to a classical piece of Moussorgsky, Night on Bald Mountain, dealing with the duality of good and evil. The piece was created by the ensemble using ballet, jazz dance, and improvisational movement.

All lyrics, skits, and supplemental music are composed and performed by the cast with the objective of exploring new dimensions in theater, according to a statement from ART in Carmel. In the "Cycle of Life" pantomine, representational movement becomes the vehicle for allowing the audience to experience a new dimension in the interrelationship of the life force.

Two of the members of the group, director David McCharen and Don Porter, appeared last Friday on the Merv Griffin Show at his invitation after Griffin saw them perform during the intermission of the recent MPC production of "Hair."

McCharen is a Monterey High School graduate who teaches at MPC's summer acting class. Some of the roles he has performed at the MPC Theater include Action in "West Side Story," Thos. Marquis de Sade in "Marat-Sade," and the title roles in both "J.B." and "Tartuffe."

Porter has appeared in a number of local productions, including A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," and several productions at the now-defunct Circle Theater.

Other cast members include Robert Greggory, who was trained in theater at Hartnell and Monterey Peninsula Colleges and who was a member of the Magic Carpet from Carmel Valley. He studied theater and martial arts for six months in Thailand and recently wrote a play.

Steve Barnes, since his discharge from the Navy one year ago has appeared at MPC in "The Drunkard," "The Great White Hope," and "The Boys in the Band."

Tara Morgenrath has been doing theater since elementary school in Big Sur. An accomplished dancer, she has done four dance productions at MPC and several plays.

The musicians are Marvin Goodwin, guitarist-songwriter, and pianist-music director Lee Garland.

Other cast members are Alaine Shrewsbury, a former San Francisco 49ers majorette who studies tap and modern dance and who appeared in "Hair" and in "The Creation of the World" as Eve. Sheila DeAngelis, who acted as a child and who performed in the Children's Reader Theater, also appears.

In charge of crew and lighting and Jeff Heath, Mike Kaplan and Dave Rigmaiden. Richard Baker is assistant director.

Tickets are $2.50 at the door. Reservations can be made by calling 375-0455.

'Los Fantoches' to be presented

Senora Lucretia Cambas, Professor of Spanish, will direct the Spanish Department's production of "Los Fantoches" (The Puppets) which will be presented by her students at 8 p.m. Friday, Aug. 9 at the Monterey Institute of Foreign Studies' S.F.B. Morse Auditorium.

"Los Fantoches" is a one-act play written by Carlos Solorzano, contemporary Mexican dramatist and playwright. The play was written in 1959 and premiered in Mexico City.

Existentialist in character, Solorzano's work reflects the despair of the Sartrain quandary--man's inability to perceive his life and destiny in view of existence's bleak realities. Man's malaise is that he lives "in this closed world" not as a thinking and knowing creature but as a puppet whose life and fate are commanded by external forces.

Through the action of the characters, their temperaments and dispositions, Solorzano presents us with the irony of our own lives. He maintains that it is only in confrontation with our own death that we are forced to question existence. The inherent paradox is that our life does not truly begin until after we have been forced to deal with our death.

As puppets, we have assumed stereotyped roles. The characters themselves are representative of these cliches: "la mujer," "el joven," "el artista," "el cabezon," "el viejito" and "el Judas." The denouement evolves from their interaction with the principal roles----those of "el viejo barbudo" and his daughter, "la nina." As the old man in his rather god-like role creates the puppets, his daughter, "la nina," destroys them. Thus Solorzano illustrates life's polarities--those of creation and destruction, life and death. The old man and his daughter are transformed through dramatist Solorzano's artistry into metaphysical symbols of good and evil.

Summer cultural events abound

By FRANK RILEY
Sunset Center Director

Getting back from my trip to the National Conference of the International Association of Auditorium Managers in Texas, I had it in mind to gradually ease back into the job--back in the swing as they say on television.

Well, what did I find but a crowd of almost 500 at the Forest Theater to see the very pleasant Jan Kessler Mime Show and then I went to Sunset Center Theatre for the rehearsal and concert of the Hidden Valley Music Seminars orchestra under the direction of Mike Zearott. And this, mind you, only Sunday!

Monday I went to the office to start down through two weeks' accumulation in an effort to find the legs of my desk, in the midst of which in comes the mail with an overwhelming and very gratifying stack of orders for tickets for the second gala season of the Carmel Festival of Dance.

Any idea of easing into the job has long since flown! It's business as usual right from the start!

Don't forget that at 2 p.m. on Sunday, Aug. 11 is the date for the annual Scots program at the Forest Theater. The featured band is the renowned, award winning Black Raven Pipe Band of San Francisco. The pipers will parade from Sunset Center up San Carlos to Ocean Avenue, along Ocean Avenue to Mt. View, and then to the Forest Theater.

The stage program begins at 2 p.m. and will include not only bagpipe music but some marching formations, Scottish dancing, and tenor, James Wright, and soprano Ann Young, a newcomer to the program this year. The entire program is presented by the City of Carmel for the enjoyment of residents and visitors. Just follow the parade if you are not sure how to reach the Forest Theater.

On the same day at 8 p.m., Hidden Valley Music Seminars will again present a concert by their symphony orchestra under Michael Zearott in the Sunset Center Theatre. If you have not heard this orchestra play, you have been missing a great experience. Get tickets from Julia Marlowe-Tickets in Room 8A at Sunset Center, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily (except Mondays), or purchase them at the door one-half hour before the concert.

At the rate orders are coming in for the Carmel Festival of Dance, I feel sure that season ticket buyers will take every seat in the house. My advice is send in your order early to avoid disappointment.

Thursday, Friday, and Saturday at 8:30 p.m. each week through Sept. 7 you can see the Forest Theater Guild's production of "Merchant of Venice" at the Forest Theater. If you have never experienced a show under the stars in the Forest Theater, you should be sure to include this Shakespeare treat in your schedule. Gates open at 7:30 p.m., with the show at 8:30 p.m. Get your tickets at the gate.

Maybe by next week I'll be better organized to write a column. In the meantime Sunset Center and the Forest Theater are really in business. There are so many great opportunities-- try not to miss any of them!

THE BLACK Raven Pipe Band of San Francisco will perform Sunday at the Forest Theater in Carmel in a free program.

Scottish music to resound

This Sunday at the Forest Theater a tradition will be observed with the appearance of a Scots' Pipe Band. Each year the pipe band program is one of the best attended of all the season.

On Sunday attendance records may well be broken for one of the most spectacular bands of the entire West Coast. The Black Raven Band of San Francisco, will provide the program. Starting with a parade from Sunset Center to the Forest Theater at 1:30 p.m., the program will continue at the Theater at 2 p.m.

It will include songs and dances of Scotland as well as musical selections and marching formations by the Pipers. This is the third year that the Black Raven organization has been invited back to the Forest Theater.

The band is under the direction of William Cathro, Pipe Major, and Drum Major, Douglas Barry. They wear the ancient MacCallum tartan and appear regularly in many Scottish celebrations winning innumerable prizes and awards for their performances.

Walk up Mt. View from Ocean Avenue to the theater. Admission is free and everyone is welcome.

Coming next week: The Songs of Richard and Peggy Weede.

Ballet Fantasque to perform at Sunset Center

Tickets are now on sale for two performances by Ballet Fantasque at Sunset Center Theatre, the first at 8:15 p.m. on Friday, Aug. 23, and the second at 2:30 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 24.

Ballet Fantasque is the first resident dance company to be established on the Monterey Peninsula. Its founder is Kira Ivanovsky, a teacher of classical ballet. Mme. Ivanovsky was featured in the Colonel de Basil Ballet Russo de Monte Carlo before establishing her school on the Peninsula.

The Ballet Fantasque performing company was created to provide a stage for the performance of the many talented young dancers that were being developed as a result of their work in the classes of the school. Through her technical knowledge and her teaching skills, Mme. Ivanovsky is able to imbue her students not only with the ability to dance well but also with an understanding of the dedication and the discipline of the classical ballet tradition.

The two Carmel performances will mark the fourth appearance of the company since its formation. Tickets are at Abinante Music Company in Monterey, Lilly Walker's in Pacific Grove, and at Julia Marlowe's - Tickets, 624-9446, Room 8A, Sunset Center. For more information, call 624-3996.

'Merchant of Venice' extended at Forest Theater

The schedule of performances for this summer's production of Shakespeare's "The Merchant of Venice," staged at Carmel's open air Forest Theater, has been extended. The play will now be performed every Thursday, Friday, and Saturday evening until Sept. 7.

Various closing dates for the production have been announced. "Every poster in town is wrong," said Jean Snow, director of public service for the Forest Theater Guild.

"Our intention has always been to run the 'Merchant' into September," she explained. "But some of the members of the cast are students, and we had to anticipate their leaving at the end of August to return to school."

Special arrangements have now been made so that the full cast will be on hand for three final performances during the first week in September, she said.

All performances will begin at 8:30 p.m., with the box office opening at 7:30 p.m. There is no reserved seating, and tickets are priced at $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for enlisted military.

Directors of the Forest Theater, which is located at Mountain View and Santa Rita streets, suggest that warm clothing be worn to the performances. The outdoor ampitheater, while providing "the sounds of the sea pounding in the distance, a pungent scent of pine trees and burning logs, and a yellow moon slowly rising," can get a bit chilly by midnight.

The Carmel Motoring Co. will continue to provide free bus service to each of the performances. This service is being provided in order to alleviate parking problems.

This year's production of the familiar Shakespearean comedy features Shirley Thomas, who plays Portia, the heiress; Don Ross, who plays Shylock, the Jew; and Peter Magee, who plays Bassanio, the spendthrift lover.

Two performances at SRO Theatre

Summer repertoire theater by the Monterey Peninsula College Players continues this week with performances of "LUV" and the opening of "Company" in the college's intimate SRO Theatre.

"LUV," the first production to open in the SRO Theatre last spring, will be presented at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday, Aug. 6-7. The last performance dates are Aug. 14-15.

Opening on Thursday, Aug. 8, is "Company," judged the "best musical" in 1971 by the New York Drama Critic Circle. Performances of "Company" will continue through Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 9-11, at 8:30 p.m. The musical will be presented again on Aug. 16-18.

The leading characters of "LUV" are Jane Evans and Ben Leudtke as Ellen and Milt Manville. Dennis Deutsch plays Harry Berlin.

"LUV" is the tale of the trials and tribulations of two schoolmates, Milt and Harry who are driven apart by Ellen. All have received disappointments along life's pathways, and have embellished these with familiar pseudo-sufferings and other face-saving humilities and defenses designed to "leave the audience rolling in the aisles," said director Ron Boyer.

The lead character of Robert in "Company" is played by Michael Byrne. Supporting characters are Steff Cunningham, David Friedland, Lisa Burroughs, Eleanor Wylde, Audrey Swanson, Steve Barnes, Nancy Servies, Nor Reyob, Billie Lee, Pat Terman, Joanie Griggs and Ed Mooney.

THE MUSIC CORNER

By IRVING W. GREENBERG

THE HIDDEN Valley Music Seminars Orchestra, under Michael Zearott, returned last Sunday to Sunset Center in Carmel to give the first of five concerts during the month of August, in a program of Haydn, Telemann and Beethoven. And, once again, Zearott directed this orchestral group in an almost unbelievably-excellent performance, something that we have become accustomed to expect from this orchestral group and its conductor--all stemming from the concentrated, intense, and devoted work of the Hidden Valley Music Seminars.

The opening number, the Beethoven Overture to The Creatures of Prometheus is incidental music composed for a ballet consisting of an overture and 16 dance numbers. The overture is the only portion of the music to survive in orchestral programs. With his insistent, incisive beat, without any extraneous motions, Michael Zearott exposed the Adagio in a stately fashion, with the wonderful playing of the woodwinds, horn and strings in a prominent and all-persuasive rapport.

The Allegro, in a brisk passage for the violins, followed by the woodwinds, was beautifully controlled and developed in an interpretive, idiosyncratic manner, so typical of the forceful and bravura tonality that Zearott always elicits from this group. Intonation, vitality, and energy marked the orchestra's dramatic codal projection.

The Telemann Suite for Flute, Strings, and Continue in A minor (originally for the recorder) is in seven short sections, an overture and six dancelike movements. In this performance, Alan Cox was the flute soloist, with the orchestra performing the dotted rhythms of the "French overture" style, as was the custom in Bach's and Telemann's day, the longer notes being held longer, and the shorter ones being played twice as fast as was written. The over-all tempo was taken, however, fast enough so that the music flowed forward freely, without any of the "limping" effects so common in performances of this type of Baroque music.

Alan Cox played in complete rapport with the orchestra, contiguous with them, with his flute playing style in idiomatic association with the Baroque method of exposition. Both the soloist and the orchestra performed the fanciful Les Plaisirs in a rapid, energetic manner; the Air a l'Italien in a long, graceful peroration, with the flautist in an exquisite singing soprano solo, with clear, decorative ornamentation. Menuet I, in a bouncy, good-humored style for strings, and the shapely Menuet II for the solo flute, attained fine tonal coloration and excellent characterful nuances. In the Rejouissance and in the Passepieds I and II there was an exquisite lyric line of dynamic implication, with the slow movement in a most viable, conceptual assertion.

This lovely movement, with its slow, elaborated triple time, was conceived by both the soloist and the orchestra in a finely-attuned peroration. The final Polonaise, quiet in its rhythmic and melodic ornamentation, was delivered by the beautifully-contoured strings in an aura of reprise of the flute melody, in a concert-like interchange.

Cox is a flautist that will bear watching, as his performance of this work, with his flute line in a distinctly gracious exposition, and with his excellent breath control, was superb. As for the orchestral playing and the conducting, Zearott is still fiery and magnetic, and the orchestra was attuned to his directive lead in a most faithful manner. Randall Bare was at the harpsichord continuo with sensitive accompaniment.

The Haydn Symphony No. 104 in D ("London") is probably this composer's most impressive and ingratiating work in this genre. In the slow, introductory Adagio, in which there is a unique, miniature movement in three-part form, and in the following two-thematic Allegro, there was a clear statement of the rhythmic motifs, with excellent definition in the horns,trumpets and drums, with the strings also partaking, in a fine, melodic evaluation of the thematic material. In the Andante, in ternary form, there was an affirmative exploration and subsequent rendition of the inner melodic, rhythmic, and harmonic values. The orchestral sonority obtainable in the long coda was one of the most fascinating parts of this movement. The Menuet, which is more closely related to the German dance than to the stately court dance in its vigorous, footstamping, partner-twirling movement, was delightfully and exquisitely performed with grace, charm, and with a perfect balance in all orchestral choirs. The finale, based on a Croatian song, Oj Jelena, starting with a drone bass in imitation of the bagpipe, once popular with this ethnic minority living in Eisenstadt, is monothematic, and is intended for listening, rather than for dancing. Its varied rhythmic and contrapuntal relations were finely delineated by the orchestra, with its intense, symphonic climactic elements. Its dance-like, as distinct from its danceable, character was fully and most fully projected.

This first concert of the present season was a clear indication of the continuing excellence of this orchestral ensemble, as well as a forecast of the very fine things to come in the following four concerts, the next one taking place on Sunday, Aug. 11.

NEW RECORDINGS

AUGUSTIN ANIEVAS is represented on an Angel disc in two pianistic warhorses. The Liszt Sonata in B minor and the Chopin Sonata No. 3 in B minor (S-36784).

The Liszt Sonata in B minor does not follow traditional lines. It is more of a fantasia, or a tone poem for piano, than a sonata. Diffuse, and at times prolix, this work also possesses singular eloquence and power. It is in a single movement in which the introduction presents the principal thematic ideas: a dramatic subject in octaves; a forceful and epic statement; and a marcato passage for the bass. Later on, religious sentiment is introduced with a stirring chorale. There also appears a lyrical section with a Beethoven-like nobility. A brilliant prestissimo section, in which earlier materials are reviewed, brings the sonata to an exciting conclusion.

The Chopin Sonata No. 3 in B minor, Op. 58 suggests melancholy in the first and third movements. The first, allegro maestoso, abounds in musical ideas, while the third is a Largo, which while not a funeral march, has a funereal character. Between them comes a scherzo in a light, whimsical manner (Allegro vivace). In the finale (Presto non tanto) in rondo form, the music is by turns dramatic and virtuoso, but of such compelling brilliance that, in its sheer sonorous beauty, it is one of the pianistic major musical achievements.

Augustin Anievas, a consummate pianist, performs these two sonatas with dignity, restraint, and interpretive balance. He displays all of his bravura pianism in a most engaging and entrancing manner, with the subdued playing having a majestic serenity. The lyric and melodic passages of both sonatas come through with an intrinsic definition and with rapturous evocation. With the Liszt sonata, one is reminded of the definitive performance by Horowitz, and in comparison, Anievas does not fare badly, which is quite a feather in his cap. As for the Chopin sonata, one is tempted to evaluate Anievas' playing against that of another pianistic giant, Rubinstein. Anievas shows a solid maturity in exposing the inner voices, that favorably compares with Rubinstein in the delineation of this sonata. The surfaces are fine, the piano sound is brilliant and exquisite in mellowness. This recording can be given the highest recommendation.

Two works of Shostakovich are recorded on a Melodya-Angel disc. One is the Symphony No. 3 in E flat minor, Op. 20 ("May First") with the Moscow Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra and the R.S.F.S.R. Russian Chorus conducted by Kiril Kondrashin; and the other is "Faithfulness," Op. 136, being eight ballads from poems of Yevgeny Dolmatovsky, performed by the Estonian State Male Chorus, conducted by Gustav Ernesaks (SR-40245).

The Symphony No. 3, subtitled the "May First," is an ingratiating work in which the main motif is joy, with the poetry of S. Kirsanov used in the final choral movement in a hymnic, rather than a political, manner. A mood of exuberance and almost boisterous merriment pervades the entire work, broken occasionally by contemplation. Again, Shostakovich has chosen a single-movement form, with four or five subdivisions. The work has been called a "Symphonic divertimento". There is virtually no thematic development and the preference here is for an abundance of episodic material. The gay mood is punctuated by a lot of percussion; in fact, the single unifying element seems to be a persistent rhythm--a long beat, followed by two short beats--that has remained one of the composer's favorite rhythmic devices.

The Moscow Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra under Kiril Kondrashin plays this work with a broad, characteristic melodic line, accentuated with effective declamatory sections and invigorating hymn-like orchestral recitatives. It is an involved and highly emotionalized exposition that they present, which tends to give to the work its dynamic range and deeply-charged instrumental counterpoint.

The R.S.F.S.R. Chorus sings the choral part in the finale with full-throated invocation, and with a vibrant climactic pitch in an ode to May Day, concluding its choral definition in a resounding climax of vocal and orchestral integration. The eight ballads "Faithfulness" mirror the composer's theme of the grandeur of the spirit and the faith in the idealistic struggle of man for happiness. They are replete with the concept of faithfulness to the country and to the legacy of Lenin. The Estonian Male Chorus sings these songs with deep, emotional power and with simplicity of vocal intensity. The surfaces on this disc are excellent, and the vocal and orchestral sound projection is all-pervasive. Being the only definitive interpretation of these two works, this record is highly recommended.

ANGEL RECORDS has released on three discs all of J.S. Bach's Concertos for Harpsichord and Orchestra, BWV 1052-2058, and the Two Concertos for Two Harpsichords and Orchestra in C major and in C minor, BWV 1060-1061.

The solo harpsichord concertos are performed by George Malcolm and the concertos for two harpsichords are played by George Malcolm and Simon Preston. In all of these works, the Menuhin Festival Orchestra is conducted by Yehudi Menuhin (S-36762, S-36790, S-37010).

Probably the most important single bit of knowledge that we have about Bach's concertos for clavier and orchestra, aside from the fact that they are great music, is that they are among the earliest concertos for keyboard instrument and orchestra.

The Concerto No. 1 in D minor, BWV 1052, is believed to have been arranged by Bach from a violin original. The first movement reappears as the introduction to Cantata No. 146, with an organ substituting for the harpsichord. The second movement was used as the basis for the opening chorus "Wir muessen durch viel Truebsal." The whole concerto was adapted complete as an introduction to Cantata No. 188.

The Concerto No. 2 in E major, BWV 1053, does not appear to have any violin original. The first movement reapprears as the introduction to Cantata No. 169, with obbligato organ. The second appears as the alto aria, "Stirb in mir," again with organ. The third movement is in the Sinfonia to Cantata No. 49.

The Concerto No. 3 in D major, BWV 1054, is a transposed version of the famous Violin Concerto No. 2 in E major, BWV 1042.

The Concerto No. 4 in A major,BWV 1055, does not seem to have any violin original nor does it reappear elsewhere.

The Concerto No. 5 in F minor, BWV 1056, does not seem to have any violin original. The second movement has been used as an introduction to Canatata No. 156.

The Concerto No. 6 in F major, BWV 1057, has been arranged from the Brandenburg Concerto No. 4 in G major, BWV 1049.The Concerto No. 7 in G minor, BWV 1058, has been arranged from the Violin Concerto No. 1 in A minor. The Two Harpsichord Concertos in C major seem to be an original clavier composition. The Two Harpsichord Concerto in C minor, BWV 1061, seem to have been adapted from a concerto for violin and oboe. All of these keyboard concertos are in three movements and Italianate in style.

The Menuhin Festival Orchestra, conducted by Yehudi Menuhin, is a superb chamber music group that performs these works with virtuosity, spirituality, clarity, and technical bravura.

George Malcolm, the harpsichordist, is a well-known virtuoso of high standing on this instrument, particularly in his technical and erudite interpretive ability in the Baroque style. This guarantees that the performances will be essentially well-oriented, and well-balanced in perfect accord with the orchestra. Needless to add, the orchestra performs in absolute unison.

The surfaces are excellent; the sound is clear and brilliant with richness and mellowness. To this reviewer, they seem to be as definitive and as idiomatic as could be desired. They are, therefore, most highly recommended.

Over the sea from Scotland to the isle of Skye

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This article on the island of Skye off the Scottish coast was written by Iona Logie of Carmel, who makes frequent trips to Scotland and who was featured recently in an interview in the Pine Cone. It reveals many facets of this little-known island.)

By IONA LOGIE

"Speed, bonny boat, like a bird on the wing,
Over the sea to Skye."

IT SEEMS quite likely that many more visitors may be taking that pleasant little run from the mainland of Scotland "over the sea to Skye," especially descendants of the Macdonalds. As many a Scottish American noted recently the press carried the story of the purchase, by the Clan Donald Lands Trust, of extensive acreage on the Sleat Peninsula at the south end of the island.

The purchase now completed, through the generosity of two American Macdonalds, the heart of these ancestral lands will now belong in perpetuity to the clansfolk worldwide. Part of Armadale Castle will become a museum, the famous arboretum will be fully restored, and in time the ruinous castle itself made useful. Meanwhile, the preservation of farm land for the small crofters on this fertile peninsula will be an accepted obligation.

Memories of the northwestern wing of Skye, with its noble, historic Dunvegan Castle, bring at once to mind the powerful MacLeods. But that ancient clan and the Macdonalds would seem to have buried the hatchet early in the 19th Century, and now a clan map shows a fairly even distribution of the two, on a line drawn roughly down the middle of the "winged isle."

It will be recalled, however, that the Macdonalds, notably the famous Flora, were the great friends and protectors of Charles Edward, "Bonnie Prince Charlie," in his 1745 flight from his English pursuers. As a threat to the English throne, he was ruthlessly hounded over the hills of Scotland, to the Western Isles, and again on the mainland.

The vision of this handsome, stalwart 25-year old prince, disguised as a serving-maid, crouched down in an open boat as he fled from Skye to the mainland, is etched on the memories of loyal Scots. For ultimately the prince had all too few of the faithful, after his costly defeat at Culloden Moor-and his subsequent flight to France, to Rome, past his mid-60s, he ended his days in physical decay, tended only by his daughter, and for many a year made desolate by the outcome of Scotland's hope for the restoration of the Stuarts.

His highland friend, Flora Macdonald, who spent some years in North Carolina, is immortalized in statues erected at Iverness, on Skye, and elsewhere. In music, her efforts and the poignant memory of Bonnie Prince Charlie are commemorated in a song which is certain to start a tear or two, in many parts of the world:

"Will ye no', will ye no', will ye no' come back again?
Mony a heart will brak in twain,
If ye no come back again."

Officially situated in the county of Inverness, this impressive island is generally considered the most picturesque as well as the largest of the Inner Hebrides. (For the proud sturdy folk of Lewis and Harris, farther north, will quickly remind you that they are dwellers in the Outer Hebrides.) Skye is easily reached by car-ferries from Mallaig on the mainland to Armadale on the southern Sleat Peninsula purchased by the Macdonalds. (No boats on Sundays, however.)

Further north, one may go also by car-ferry on a slightly longer trip from the Kyle (Strait) of Lochalsh to Kyleakin port on Skye. There are also excellent motor coach trips from Glasgow and Edinburgh, with overnight stops at several highland towns. A tour of this nature takes anywhere from five to seven days, depending on the region covered, but for a satisfying stay on Skye itself, at least a week should be allotted.

The island is inhabited by some 7,500 people, is 50 miles long and some 600 square miles in area. Its terrain is distinguished by many sea-lochs which deeply indent the land, breaking it up into several peninsulas. Its far-famed Coolins are jagged, dark mountains, spectacular scenery as well as a challenge and a hazard to climbers.

There are, however, "days of magic," says Gertrude Bone in her book of poetic sketches and woodcuts entitled "Of The Western Isles": "There are days when the islands gleam like jewels. If you find Loch Coruisk ("Hollow of Waters") on a day when the fantastic peaks are sunny to their very pinnacles, and the scene is like a stage setting for Prospero's island, you will be wise on such a day to seek the loch."

Wild and beautiful sights indeed are Loch Coruisk and Loch Scavaig, lying in the shadow of the Coolins. Some hardy souls will venture out on Scavaig, for instance, in a little open boat under a skillful Skyeman's handling. Others, like this writer, elected to take refuge in the grey stone schoolhouse near the loch, by permission of a young Scottish master, anything but reticent or dour.

His flock of little MacKinnons, Mackays, Macdonalds, Macraes would charm any visitor, observing them on a September return to the confines of school desks and lessons. The New York visitor was more than a little dashed, however, by the teacher's parting shaft: "From New York, is it you are! And what is it you teach the young there,--the use of firearms?"

"Alas," was the meek reply. "I fear you've been seeing all the worst American films."

THIS ENCOUNTER with wry Scottish humor took palce in a relatively wild and rural spot. Skye has its major towns, too--Armadale, Broadford, Kyleaking, and Portree, the last being the capital of the island, with a population of some 2,000 souls. With attractive shops, a pleasant harbor, and a pier for the ever-welcome steamers, Portree shelters a busy fishing fleet. The name of the town means "King's Haven" in the Gaelic, commemorating a visit of James V.

Another James, the Boswell, with his idol Dr. Johnson, stayed on the island of Raasay in the harbor, during their long tour of the Hebrides in 1773. They were also entertained at Broadford, a small tourist town of some 900 population, the starting-point for motor trips to the Lochs--Coruisk and Scavaig.

For the legions of young (and older) tourists devoted to hiking and tramping, Skye offers many an alluring path. For the vacationing visitor who simply wants to bask in awesome scenery, with a mild, misty Hebridean aura about it, there are also charms. For the lover of music, especially one who might fortunately sit in at a "ceilidh" (a fireside song-fest, perhaps with the pipes as well) there will be rich satisfactions.

DUNVEGAN CASTLE on the Isle of Skye is one of the interesting spots on a trip to Scotland the traveler should visit.

1950's music gets good response in Big Sur

The Big Sur Grange Hall rocked to the sounds of fine country and western music last weekend, featuring Paul Bowman and the Country Showmen, a San Francisco band.

The videotaped show, the first in a series of on-the-road performances, will be broadcast on KEMO-TV in the San Francisco Bay Area.

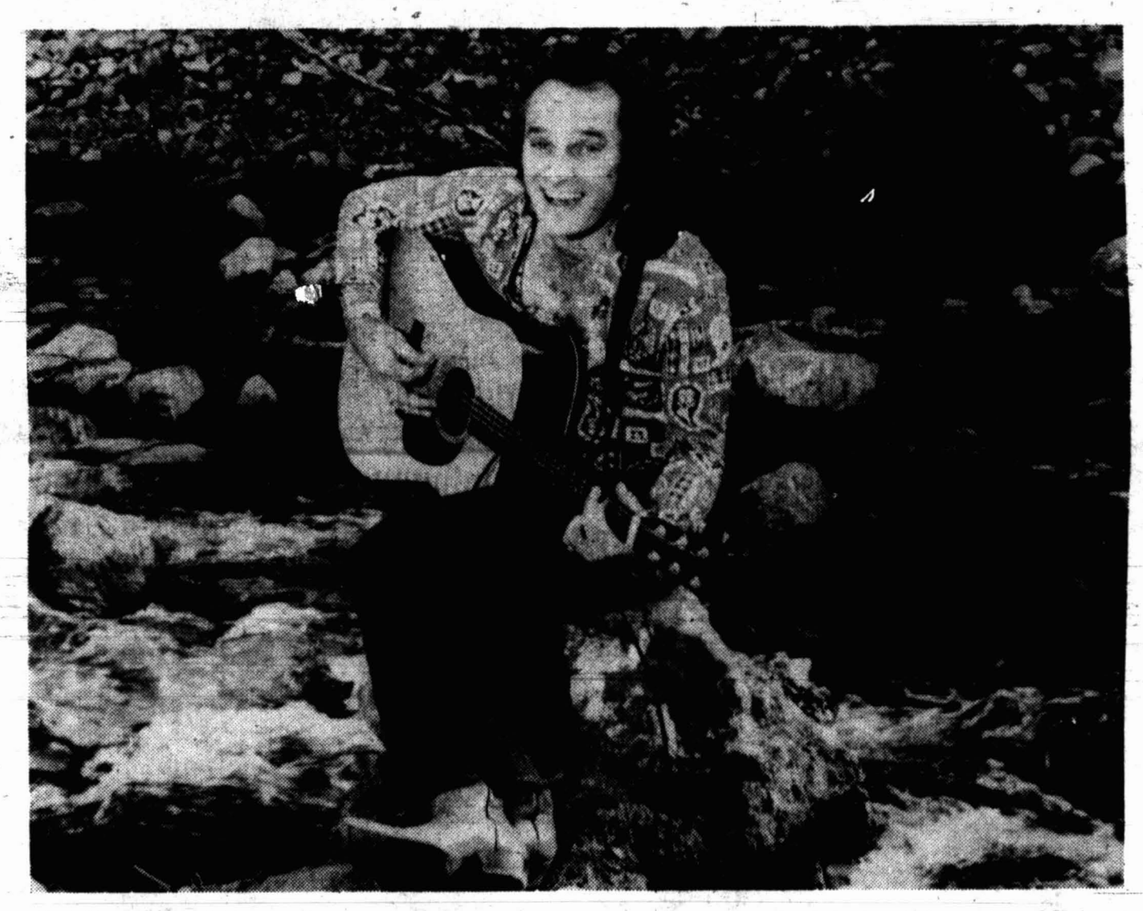
A crowd of enthusiastic dancers filled the hall both Friday and Saturday nights, clapping, stomping, singing and shouting for more. As Bowman did his impression of Elvis Presley, young girls screamed and reached for the stage as though the year were 1958.

Few sat down for "Blue Suede Shoes" and "Hound Dog." His interpretation of Johnny Cash, if less flamboyant, met with equal success. No imitation was needed, however, for Bowman's own friendly and warm style.

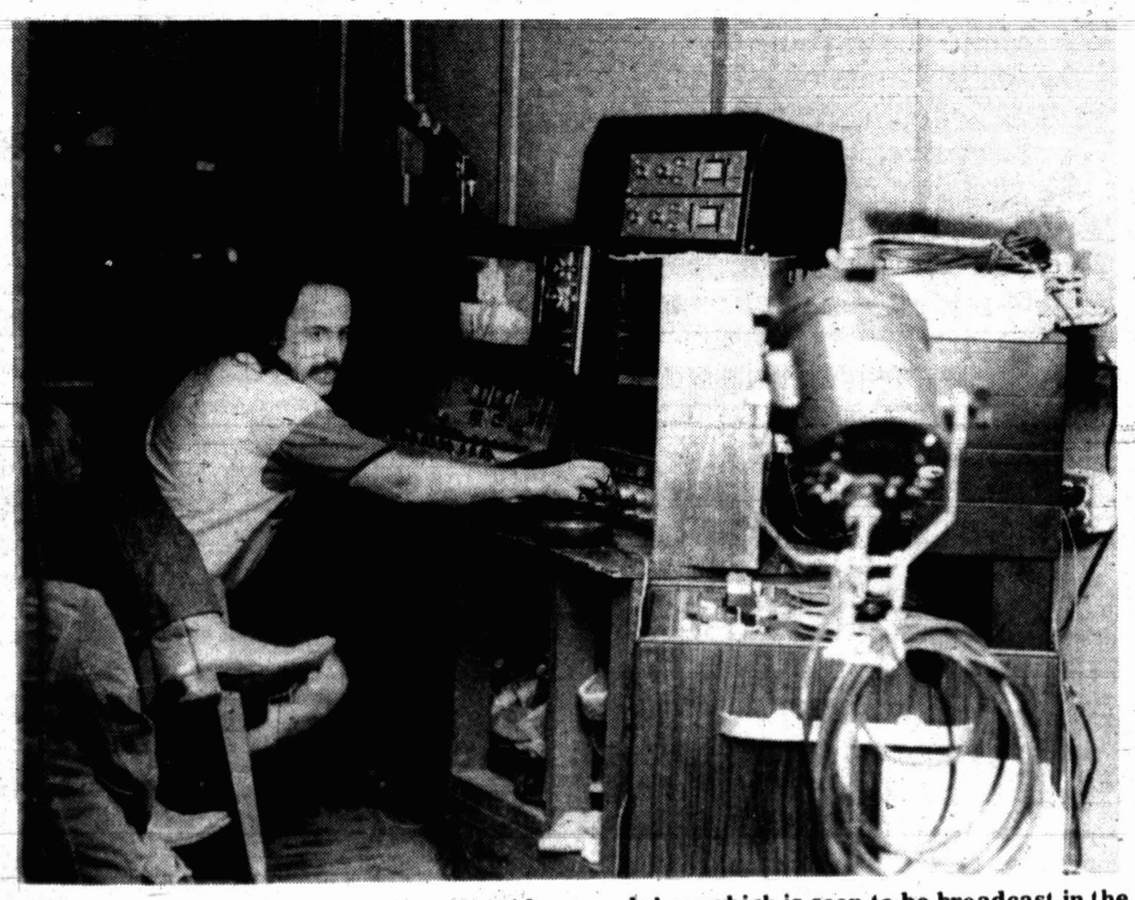
He received strong support from four singer-muscians. David Lewark on guitar; Lockwood Saunders on bass guitar; Rick Meyers on piano; and David Mann on drums.

The Big Sur Grange Hall holds between 150 and 200 people. And from this audience, Paul Bowman and the Country Showmen will go on to appear before 10,000 people next week at Marineworld.

The show is produced by "The Wizard and Cecil B."--Pete Slanson and Dom Humphrey. Proceeds from these two performances will go toward purchasing much needed equipment for the Big Sur ambulance.



PAUL BOWMAN taped part of the performance outside, near the Big Sur River, in addition to the benefit for the Big Sur Ambulance.



PRODUCER Pete Slauson monitors the video-taped show which is soon to be broadcast in the San Francisco Bay Area. Some of the scenes were made outdoors and some inside the Grange Hall.

LOCAL SINGER Fern Trotter provided an unexpected treat by singing "My Man" and accompanying herself on the piano. She was called back for two encores.

TM takes hold among the over-30 generation

By TRICIA GORMAN

Since a Transcendental Meditation Center was established in Pacific Grove about three years ago, more than 600 Peninsula residents have begun meditating. And indications are that what was an item of interest almost exclusively to young people a year ago has much greater following among middle-aged persons.

The followers of Transcendental Meditation, known as TM, claim that 20 minutes of meditation morning and evening relieves stress and allows the meditator to enter a state of restfulness deeper than deep sleep. Meditators call this state "restful awareness."

Bruce Saunders, the local president of the International Meditation Society and himself a meditator for five years, claimed that through the regular practice of the technique, the conscious mind is expanded.

"The average human being is said to use 5 to 10 per cent of his mental potential. Through TM we contact the inner latent potential and start unfolding it in our daily life. With TM the mind is clearer, there is a greater ability to concentrate, we don't daydream as much and we are more efficient."

"Whatever we want to be and accomplish in life is more within reach because there is simply more awareness to deal with situations in life," Saunders said.

Meditators come from all walks of life and all age groups. Though it had a basically young following about 15 years ago when it was first introduced in America, many businessmen and professional people have joined the movement in recent years.

Several interviews with local residents who have become meditators follow. All of them were enthusiastic, and sensitive to the fact that describing TM in words could only approximate their experiences.

His license plate reads "Relax." It's a word which has become very meaningful to Bill Pentony of Big Sur since he began meditating a year ago.

"The profound part of TM," he said, "is the relaxing technique that gives your nervous system a chance to regenerate itself. Meditating has become a very important part of my life."

Pentony, a real estate agent for Carmel Realty, came into contact with TM a year ago June when a Swiss couple came to him looking for land for Maharishi International University (there is a branch in Santa Barbara and a new campus to open in Fall in Iowa). Pentony explained that as more people in the movement came to look at property he became more and more interested. "There was an intriguing quality to these people."

"After a while I decided to start meditating. I must admit, I had a lot of skepticism" he said.

Now his whole family mediates, including his two children, age 7 and 15. Adult meditators receive a mantra, a special sound which they repeat while meditating; children from age four to 10 receive what are known as "walking mantras."

"We've seen a difference in the children. They've become more relaxed, more sympathetic, more sharing and helpful and kind. They have more interest in the world around them."

Pentony says one thing he notices about being around meditators is that there is a great deal of laughter. "It is a manifestation of a kind of joy that comes when the physical nervous system is in that particular state of relaxation. You experience a restful alertness that you can take out of meditation and apply to your daily life."

Pentony says he finds he is not working with his nervous energy as he used to—"that's quite draining." He said the body can only sustain itself on nervous energy for so long without becoming depleted, "but the natural flow of the body can sustain you for a lifetime."

Pentony quoted Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, TM's founder: "Do less; accomplish more."

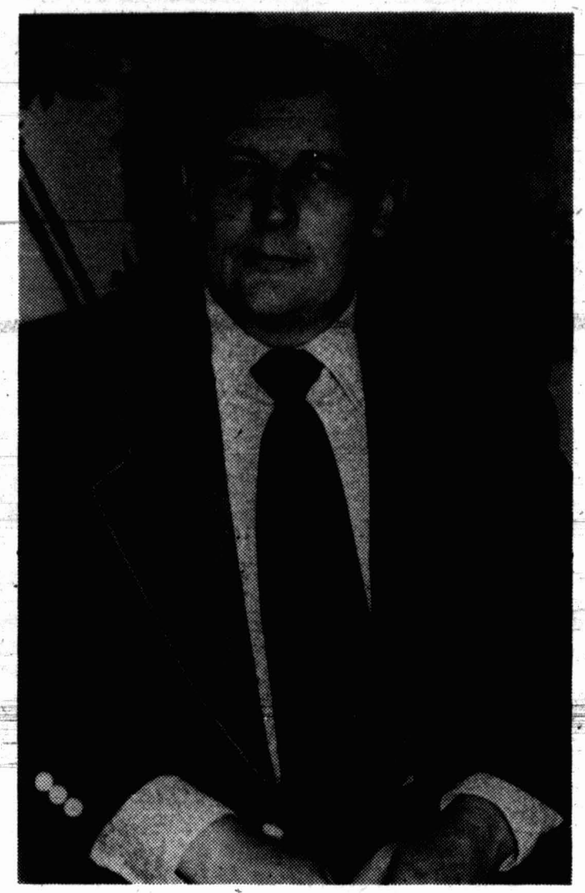
"Problems still exist when you meditate," Pentony said, "but solutions are more readily available."

LES AND WILLOW Stegeman of Carmel were introduced to Transcendental Meditation in May. A neighbor invited them over to her house to hear an introductory lecture and they have both been involved since.

Les Stegeman is an insurance broker and the owner of Del Insurance Agency in Carmel. His wife, Willow, works as his secretary. Stegeman said both have benefited considerably from meditation.

"We are business people and we live with the usual stress that implies. One telephone call can change my whole day; sometimes it can get hectic around here.

"However, since meditating twice a day



LES STEGEMAN

I've found considerable peace of mind. My reactions to people have improved and I'm taking things more in stride."

Both Stegeman and his wife meditate for 20 minutes in the morning and in the evening. They have combined their meditation with yoga stretches, though that is not necessarily true of all who practice TM. Stegeman says he was surprised to learn that he could even sit still for 20 minutes.

The first time I meditated I went into a state of restfulness I hadn't experienced in a long time. Our greatest benefit has been the ability to relax more. The pressures haven't lessened, but we are able to handle them better."

8 WAYS TO TRIM KILOWATTS OUT OF YOUR COOKING.

You use more energy in your kitchen than in any other room. Economize with these suggestions:

1. Make sure your oven and surface units or burners are shut off when not in use.
2. Keep oven doors completely closed until food is cooked. Every time you open the door, the oven temperature drops from 25° to 50°. (Oven door windows aid the "peek-a-boo" cook.)
3. Use cooking utensils with flat bottoms and tight fitting covers whenever possible. Be sure pots and pans are the right size for range units or burners.
4. Prepare a complete meal when using the oven—main course, vegetables and dessert. Use foods that cook well at similar temperatures. (Exception: delicate green or leafy vegetables.)
5. Bake and broil from a cold oven start. There's no need to preheat an oven.
6. Thaw frozen meats in refrigerator before cooking. Cook as soon as possible after thawing, and do not re-freeze unless meat has been cooked. A defrosted roast requires approximately 33% less cooking time than a frozen one.
7. Turn off electric surface units a short time before food is done. Food will continue cooking on heat stored in the coils.
8. Never use range or oven to heat the kitchen. That's not its function, and it is costly as well as a waste of energy.

All PG&E electric customers—no matter where they live—get much of their electricity from power plants fueled by scarce oil and natural gas. So it's important for everyone to help save energy wherever possible.

Transcendental meditation's popular

The Stegeman's son had been involved with TM when he was at Cal State Hayward three years ago, but Les and Willow didn't have enough interest at that time to investigate it for themselves.

"I wished I had known about this before," Stegeman said, "It has really made a difference in my life."

Irma Wolovsky of Carmel said she has felt more relaxed, less tense, and more open to people and ideas since she began meditating in April of this year. "Meditating twice a day is tending to free me of stress and anxiety," she said.

"I've noticed a change in awareness. I used to be very tense and controlled; that's one of the reasons I went into TM. I know there's so much to enjoy if we only allow ourselves to let go."

Mrs. Wolovsky says her tenseness hasn't altogether disappeared, but she is aware that it is lessening. She began meditating in April after seeing the change in a friend who had been meditating for quite a while.

"We had never talked much about it before even though my friend was an instructor of TM. She went to Europe for a three month course given to instructors and when she returned I noticed the difference in her immediately. I thought it was worth a try."

Mrs. Wolovsky said she would not have always been receptive to meditating. A few years ago it was associated in her mind with "hippies" and it was something she would not have considered for herself.

What do her friends think about her meditating? "Most of my friends and neighbors are now meditating themselves. I had an introductory lecture at my house for friends at which one of the instructors spoke. Since then, many of my associates have begun meditating themselves."

Mrs. Wolovsky recently had an experience which tested her ability to handle stress. She was in a situation which was quite upsetting, and as she felt her old frustrations coming to the fore, she suddenly was able to control herself.

"It was like a light coming on. I suddenly saw my old self getting upset and realized I didn't have to. "I think it's a feeling you have to experience yourself to understand," she said.

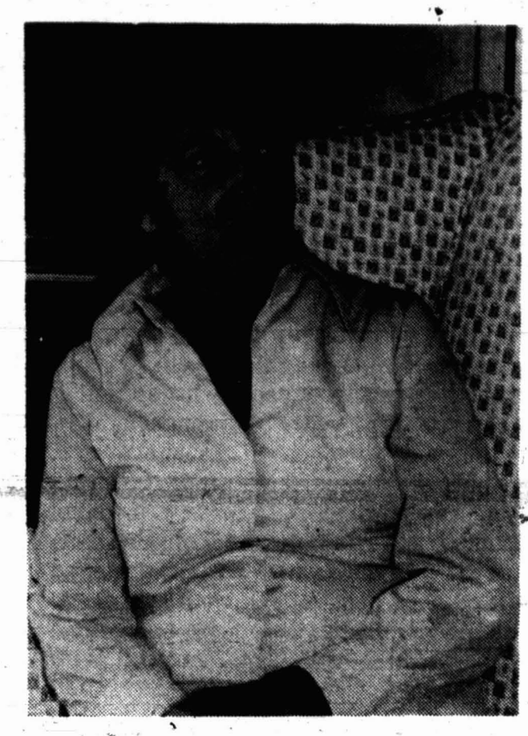
She said beginners shouldn't expect "something to happen" the moment they begin their mantra and go into meditation. "The effects are very subtle."

She is taking a course at Monterey Peninsula College and said she notices that her concentration is better, and that she is able to sit through a three-hour lecture and still keep her mind on the subject. "Perhaps as your tensions weaken more of the mind's abilities come through."

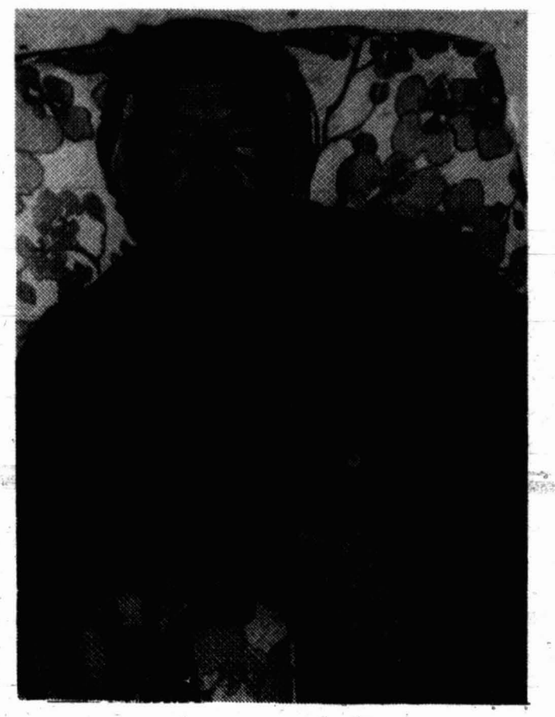
Edwin Landblad, a general contractor in Carmel, knew about TM for approximately six years before he began meditating this year. He attended a lecture in Carmel many years ago, but said he misunderstood TM to be somehow connected to an Indian religion.

He said during the past few years he has heard that many universities are incorporating TM into their curriculum and that some private colleges are even requiring it as a pre-requisite. "That interested me," Landblad said.

Early this year a young friend moved into the house he was living in. She practiced TM, and the more she talked about it the more interested Landblad became. He decided to learn to meditate himself and went to the headquarters at 1184-G Forest Ave. in Pacific Grove to attend the lectures and five teaching sessions.



IRMA WOLOVSKY



WILLIAM PENTONY

"That was six weeks ago," Landblad said, "and it's changed my whole being."

"I now have a good inner feeling about where I'm at, whether working, having fun or conversing. It is a matter of not being under pressure all the time. It relieves stress that shouldn't be there in the first place."

He said he has become more sociable and outgoing. "I find talking to strangers is very enlightening. It's something I wouldn't have done before."

Landblad stressed that TM in no way conflicts with any religious beliefs or modes of living.

"Pople have come to me lately and tell me that I look so much better, much happier," he said. "It's true. People in TM smile more; they're more spontaneous. It's a free way of being."

Scandinavian recipes from the Scandia Restaurant

By PHYLLIS JERVEY

ONE OF Carmel's landmarks is the Scandia Restaurant facing the Pine Inn on Ocean Avenue. Originally called the Blue Bird, it became a Scandinavian rendezvous and today is jointly owned and operated by a Persian family.

Now that gives real variety, although Jack Hakim who has been in Carmel 15 years believes in continental dishes at large. His waiters and waitresses are international, all swift, interesting and well trained, under the guidance of the youngest of four brothers, Shahram Hakim-Baba.

"What, no Middle East specialties?" we asked. Yes, Flaming Shish Kabobs on Rice." We followed the chef and saw him cut up exact and generous cubes of pure beef with no tenderizers, excepting a burgundy marinating overnight.

But what I discovered was the modest please don't write me as the theme of your story. However, the secret chef was generous with instructions on how to prepare Frikadellar, a speciality of the house: This is a Scandinavian meat ball consisting of three ground meats. beef, pork, veal, whipped cream, eggs and spices.

Make into many little balls, after adding shredded onion and raw potato, salt and pepper. They are browned on top of the stove in a large skillet with spare amount of oil, then put to bake in same utensil in oven. Add burgundy wine. These are delicate, fragrant and soft bur perfectly formed. We sampled a hot one straight from its "nest." The sauce is subtly concoted by adding a dash of arrowroot to the drippings in pan, then canned mushroom pieces and stems. We suspect the spices are nutmeg, allspice, dash of powdered cloves. Serve garnished with pickled red cabbage and lingonberries. This is further sustained by an assorted relish tray, cream of chicken or fresh vegetables, or jellied consomme madrelene soups; crackers, rolls and butter, with desserts extra.

It's all made right on the premises by Ada Graham who has been their baker for 13 years. What beautifully hand decorated fresh strawberry pies, apple cakes, apricot tarts, Danish Rum Fromage (a fluffy chiffon custard), Rodgrot Med Flode (Scandia Fruit Compote with Cream). We saw them and tasted as they were being finished to be arranged in a glassed showcase in the dining room. One goes up, looks, follows one's taste buds, indulges, and diets are forgotten.

A NICE idea is that a special dinner is served from 5 p.m. for those who want to catch an early movie. Apparently the service is continuous with a cheerful crew of young enthusiasts.

The Europen trained American chef thought that Party Plans' readers would like his version of Biff Lindstrom for patio barbecues. For individual servings have 8 ozs. ground sirloin steak, 1 chopped fresh onion, 4 beets, minced. Combine with meat. Form into patties. Broil over charcoal, turning once with spatula. Taste for seasoning to each his own.

Fry eggs separately, put on top of meat, add capers. Surround with asparagus tips and broiled tomato. Sounds complicated, but not if the ingredients are on hand for each to assemble his own. It's a glorified he-man nourishment for children, men and gals. We suggest brushing with A-1 sauce, American style, before broiling. Apple pie and cheese..so as not to be over whipped creamed.

From one of my favorite cookbooks "The Chef's Secret Cook Book" we like this; Shrimp in Dill Sauce:

Two cups canned small shrimp, drained; 4 tbsps. butter, 2 tbsps. oil; 1 cup milk; 4 tbsps. flour; 1 cup freshly chopped dill; about 1 cup canned chicken broth, s&p to taste with vinegar or lemon juice, 1 cup sour cream.

Make a cream sauce with melted butter, oil, flour, milk and 1 tbsp. dill. Stir until smooth, dilute with chicken broth Correct seasonings. Just before serving, bring to gentle boil again, add shrimp with sour cream, rest of dill and vinegar or lemon juice. Serve over fluffy rice. Perhaps you would like to add a tiny pinch of sugar to lift this intriguing ensemble.

So you see what a Viking decor can do for enterprising Persians.The melange is intriguing and rewarding, also quite reasonable compared to many overpriced Peninsula restaurants.

We almost forgot to say that their Chef's Salad is as it should be: crisp cold shredded lettuce with julienne strips of ham, turkey, cheese, wedges of tomato and hard cooked egg, and dressing of your choice. Sunday Brunch is boosted by champagne cocktails, sparkling so that life begins again, especially with your current best beau.

KEEP YOUR COOL
AND CONSERVE ENERGY, TOO.

Follow these summer tips for greater comfort and wise use of energy.

1. Use heat-producing appliances sparingly. Turn off lamps, television and stereos when they're not in use.

2. Keep drapes closed on hot days. Light-colored drapes and curtains reflect heat and sunlight outward. For even better heat reflection attach a light-colored shade outside your house over large window areas.

3. Just as good insulation and weatherstripping help keep your house warm in winter, they help keep it cool in summer. Make sure your insulation is adequate.

4. On hot days proper attic ventilation can reduce attic temperatures as much as 50 degrees, so your air conditioner won't have to work so hard. You'll save energy and money.

5. Before you go on vacation, turn your water heater control to its lowest setting. Then, when you return, simply reset the control. That way you won't waste energy heating water when you're not there to use it.

Susan Parker marries William Conners

Susan Margaret Parker, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Sydney R. Parker of Carmel Meadows, and William Buck Conners were married on Saturday, July 20, at the First Unitarian Church in San Francisco. The Rev. Michael McKinley officiated at the nuptial ceremony. A reception was held afterwards in the Heritage Room of the Marines Memorial Club in San Francisco.

The bride is a graduate of Santa Catalina School in Monterey and of the San Jose Hospital School of Nursing. She is a registered nurse, presently at St. Mary's Hospital in Reno, Nev. She plans to attend Stanford University in the fall in the Nurse Practitioner program.

The groom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Conners of Boulder City, Nev. is a graduate of the University of Nevada. He was a captain in the U.S. Marine Corps for four years. He enters the University of Santa Clara School of Law in September.

The bride wore a floor length gown of dotted Swiss and eyelet. The bridal attendants were her sister-in-law, Elizabeth DeYound Parker of Palo Alto and Laura Waller of Sacramento.

The groom's best man was Charles Mohr of Reno. Ushers included the groom's brother, Tom Conners, of Boulder City and the bride's brother, Stephen Bruce Parker of Palo Alto.

VETERANS OF WORLD WAR I

Monterey Barracks 634 of the Veterans of World War I will hold their regular monthly meeting on Saturday Aug. 10 at Monterey Neighborhood center, Lighthouse and Dickman in Monterey. The meeting will convene promptly at 12 noon.

Barracks Commander Maxwell McMillan will preside. The ladies of the auxillary of the barracks will serve a luncheon and all World War I members are cordially invited to be their guests. Discussion on the agenda will be the various bills now pending in the Congress that would grant a pension to World War I Veterans. These old Vets are the only group of Veterans that have been ignored over the passing years. Past Commander Guy Stohr, who has just returned from a meeting of the second district of the organization, will offer the program that has been related to him.

ECKANKAR LECTURE OFFERED

The local Eckankar Satsang Society invited the public to attend an open lecture and discussion to be held at 8 p.m. today in the public room at Northern California Savings and Loan, 7th and Dolores.

Eckankar is described as "not a yoga, religion, or philosophy, nor a metaphysical or occult system. It is merely a way to God-realization via soul travel.

Adherents claim that through this doctrine an extension of the self beyond the physical realm of existence and into the spiritual realms is possible, thus allowing existential questions to be answered.

Golfer prepares Singapore treat

It was a Singapore swing to Carmel. International golfer Herb Lim paid his second visit to the Monterey Peninsula within one year to visit his friends and some of his favorite golf courses. The last time he was here he prepared an impromptu dinner at Betty Barron's home in Carmel. It was an intoxicating array of Chinese dishes that established him as an excellent cook as well. Then, he was off for more golf around the world.

Last weekend he came with family and friends. Mrs. Lim (Doris) helped prepare the exotic dishes, assisted by Mrs. E.S. Lim (Pat), at the home of John Fulton on San Mateo and San Luis in Carmel. The setting could not have been more delightful.

Guests entered down a rock-strewn path which curved to a huge carved oak door. John's beautiful waterfall (man-made), which cascades gracefully over natural rock and tropical plants from his livingroom and deck, formed a musical backdrop and a diversion for little Miss Lie Mei Lim, 5-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E.S. Lim, and lovely Karin, Herb and Doris Lim's teenage daughter.

Other guests, for the most part, congregated around the huge tree growing through the house between the kitchen pass-through and the ever-popular bar, to the dining room. It was here that everyone watched Herb and Doris prepare a Chinese dinner, Singapore style, with succulent curry chicken and rice, and a truly different shrimp and egg foo yong.

Ex-State Department officer Sterling Cottrell, who recently retired after many years in the Orient, assisted (and kibitzed) as did Charlie Chan, another golf enthusiast from Singapore. With all this help, how could Herb fail to win applause for his culinary skill?

Sterling Cottrell and Herb were members of the famed Ma Mee Makim Kichel Club and played poker religiously every Monday night there. But during those years, Herb found time to be the Minister of Tourism for Singapore, president of East Asian Film Company, the Avis representative for Southeast Asia, a restaurateur, and a race horse owner.

He still manager to spend six months of each year going around the world playing golf. He came here fresh from the links in London and Las Vegas. In the two days he was here he played Pebble Beach, Rancho Canada and Spyglass. He departed Carmel for a round or two with friends in Los Angeles.

Among those at the dinner party were: Mrs. Merryll Cottrell, also a friend from Singapore days, Col. and Mrs. James T. Root, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lloyd, Mrs. Gerald Barron, Mr. Eldon Christian, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Forsyth, Mrs. Carole Moran, all of Carmel, Mr. Jay Clancy, Pebble Beach, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Speck, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Strosnider, San Francisco, Mrs. Barbara Nelson, Mrs. Sally Crawford, Mr. Greg Teaby, Mr. Pierre Delfausse, and young Johnny Fulton.

MR. AND MRS. Herb Lim (left) and Pat Lim begin the authentic Singapore-style Chinese dinner in John Fulton's Carmel kitchen.

Beta Sigma Phi members presented at beginning day tea

At the traditional Beginning Day Tea of Monterey Peninsula Council of Beta Sigma Phi Society, held at the Carmel Meadows home of Mrs. Ernest Hand on Aug. 4, a total of 15 members of the social and cultural organization were presented with the Preceptor Laureate degree. The award is the newest and highest honor of the sorority.

Officiating at the candlelight ceremony were Preceptor Lambda Chapter members Mrs. William Benson, Mrs. Robert Hoag, Mrs. Grace Evans and Mrs Hand.

Honorees, many of whom have been in Beta Sigma Phi between 18 and 35 years, were Mrs. James V. Duffy. Mrs. Vernon Roberts, Mrs. Bill Baldwin, Mrs. Lewis Fitzsimmons, Mrs. James McGuire, Mrs. Everett Castanos and Mrs. Wayne Cowan.

Other long-time members included Mrs. Darol Smith, Mrs. Dudley Laughton, Mrs. Mary Frances Handshy, Mrs. Claralyle Holman, Mrs. Dorothy Crosby, Mrs. Lavon Decker, Mrs. Don Gasperson and Mrs. Harry Orser.

Mrs. Howard Hinckley, Monterey Peninsula Council president, led the receiving line for the honorees at the tea and told of their accomplishments in their sorority careers. Mrs. Hinckley gave a brief history of the members and told of meetings during World War II in homes with blackout windows. She explained how these members helped to form the background of Beta Sigma Phi's present five chapters on the Peninsula.

She mentioned the varied accomplishments of these sorority sisters in the field of "home-engineering," business and interior decoration while still remaining active members in their chapters.

Two Northern California Area brunches were sponsored on the Peninsula by this group in 1951 and 1964; five members are past presidents of the council and one holds a state office for the Retirement Home Committe of Beta Sigma Phi.

Assisting Mrs. Hinckley at the tea were chapter presidents Mrs. Ruth Gregorio, Beta Tau; Mrs. Steven Thornburg, Kappa Omicron; Mrs. Thomas Maddern, Xi Epsilon Alpha; and Mrs. Norman Servies, Epsilon Psi, Preceptor.

Aye, it was a good day for the Scottish !

Kilts were to be seen everywhere and the sound of bagpipes filled the air. Last weekend saw the return of the Highland Games sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Scottish Society. The sixth annual Highland Games attracted 2,000 spectators and were held in Pebble Beach.

The day-long activities included marching pipe bands, highland dancing, athletic events and competitions. Tiny tots enjoyed "Pony Rides for the Wee Ones," while the adults were tantalized by homemade Scottish shortbread (provided by the Mother Goose Chapter of the Children's Home Society), Scottish clothing, and liquid refreshment.

Activities began at 10 a.m. with marching by the Stuart Highlanders. Other bands entertaining during the day were the local Salinas Valley Highlanders, the Prince Charles Junior Pipe Band from Marin, the Royal Canadian Legion and the Culloden Moor Pipe Band, both from San Francisco. Individual members of these bands participated in a solo bagpipe competition which lasted throughout the day.

Guests milling around the large open field had their choice of many activities throughout the day. Pipe bands were marching from 10:15 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the center of the field and special events were presented, as were athletic competitions.

The special events began at 12:30 p.m. with the Palo Alto Country Dancers. They were followed at 1:30 p.m. by the Trained Shelty Show with Luann Vidak of Watsonville, a regular feature at the games.

Les Bruhn of Valley Ford, California presented a fascinating show with his Sheep Dog Exhibition at 2 p.m. With four Scotch Border collies, Bruhn corraled five Dorset sheep by means of a series of verbal commands. Bruhn, a rancher, presents exhibitions as a hobby and has performed in Santa Rosa, Crescent City, Ukiah and Roseburg, Ore. His four collies are imported from Scotland

The last special event of the day was pony vaulting, presented by the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center.

Highland dancing exhibitions were also presented, starting with the Seann Triubhas. Other dances included the Sword Dance, the Highland Fling and the Argyle Broad Sword.

The athletic events were a crowd pleaser, starting at 1 p.m. with "Putting the Heavy Stone." Winner of this event was John Ross of Santa Rosa. Other events and their winners were: Long Jump-John Ross, Santa Rosa; 100 Yard Dash-Jacques Lerd, Pebble Beach; and the Caber Toss-Stan Russell of Los Gatos.

Russell broke a close tie with Gordon Varnadoe of San Jose, a tie which was only broken when the men threw the caber (a long, heavy pole) from a standing rather than a running position.

Special awards were given to guests wearing kilts who were not band members or highland dancers. The Best-Dressed Scot awards went to lad Frank Connally of San Francisco and lassie Jean MacPherson, 10, Sunnyvale. Oldest Scot in Kilt award went to 86-year old Helen Green Halloran of Pacific Grove, who wore the ancient McDonald tartan. The Scottish Shop in Carmel donated the prize for the oldest Scot in Kilt.

Solo Bagpipe Competitions were held from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. for those individual band members who wished to compete. First place winners were: Frank Conley, Carmel Valley; Dan McNear, San Rafeal; Michael Reynolds, San Rafael; Ken Sutherland, Madera; Will Sutherland, Santa Clara; Pat Connolly, Daly City; Mat Burgin, Mill Valley; and Jim Wallace.

The winner of the Hole-in-One competition was Hunter Stewart of Carmel who came within 3'11" of the pin. Don McPherson of Sunnyvale won the Drum Majors' Competions.

The Monterey Peninsula Scottish Society, the group which sponsored the Highland Games, consists of approximately 150 persons interested in Scotland and Scottish traditions. Though many members are themselves Scots, it is not a requirement to be one.

Throughout the year the organization sponsors other activities, including the Tartan Ball in late November, a family picnic, a golf dinner in September, and the Bobby Burns dinner to celebrate the birthday of the Scottish poet, Robert Burns.

The mayor's report

By BERNARD ANDERSON

Every once in a while public or private bodies charged with solving administrative problems are forced to make decisions which possibly do not include every imaginable or unknown contingency which may arise in the future.

Then when the unexpected arises sometime in the future, those who love to say "I told you so" or "Why didn't the so-called brains foresee the pitfall that has now led to a catastrophe at your or my expense?" are quite loud. Invariably the comments and criticisms take the form which reminds me of an old Yiddish saying: "Somebody else's backside is good to spank."

After all the blood, sweat and tears we have gone through to solve our library needs for space, parking and service to the public, along comes a good Samaritan with the following suggestion I'm sure none of us thought might be a solution:

"Have you people every paused to consider that the Carmel Library is on some very, very valuable land? Why don't you do this? Work out some kind of an agreement with a big financial and-or building organization which will bring about the following:

"The present library torn completely down.

"A very deep hole dug into the ground.

"A building inserted which is three or four or five stories underground and two or three stories above the ground.

"The City of Carmel retains ownership of the land and obtains for free, one floor of the building for use as a library.

"The ground floor should be ALL automobile parking, by hour or day.

"The financial and-or building organization retain complete ownership of the remaining floors of the building and rent or lease or sell space.

"It would be nice if the City of Carmel could permit the building to go higher than even three stories. It would not block the view for those who would view it from the hill.

"The City of Carmel would obtain, for free, a brand-new library and a large automobile parking area which might be leased to tenants for their parking!

"Just think of what this would do for Carmel!

"I submit this idea to you completely out of selfishness, sort of. I sincerely think this idea is worth $1,000.

"The City of Carmel would not need all of one floor for a library, unless space could be used for classes for children and even an indoor pool for children, say from little waders up to the age of 12! Wouldn't that be great? It wouldn't have to be a large pool, but it should be a LONG, narrow pool so that the little ones actually have their area, and plenty of it, in which to sail boats and paddle and have a great time.

"Just think! The Carmel library would be the only library in the nation, and in perhaps the entire world, with a swimming pool for little children.

"What a thing that would be to promote in telling nation and the world what kind of a place Carmel really is! There always has to be a 'gimmick.' One very little thing, IF IT'S GREAT, can express so very, very much day after day, year after year. Parenthetically, there's a thing in Christianity called the Golden Rule. I don't like it. My Golden Rule is 'be kind to little children.'

But, to get back to a serious side of forward planning, early this spring several situations in planning reviews and permit granting by the city forcibly brought out the fact that not all phases of the planning function were being fully covered. Situations arise as environmental aspects and economic conditions develop in our rapidly changing society.

The most glaring inconsistency in plan reviews seemed to be the lack of a full knowledge of what building placement on the site did to the vegetative cover of the area. Tree removals or tree survival from excavations were the most critical.

Several fine pines were lost on the Carmel Foundation, Dolores Lodge and Lobos Lodge developments. A revision of the specifications for planning and zoning should almost obviate these losses in the future.

Paragraph 1322.7 b. of these revisions provides: "Site plan showing proposed structures, contours, site developments, landscaping and natural features retained, parking and loading facilities, trash storage areas, circulation, public rights-of-way, public and private easements, trees both public and private that are endangered, to be removed or to be retained, and sufficient other information to demonstrate the proposed development or improvement."

Water hearings to resume in October

Public hearings on the extent of the water supply on the Monterey Peninsula and on an interim order banning most new development are to resume before the Public Utilities Commission Oct. 1-3 in Seaside City Hall.

Dates of the resumption of hearings were set last week by hearing examiner Parke Boneysteele.

Hearings commence at 10 a.m. Oct. 1 and all interested persons are invited to attend. The hearing examiner may include in those three days of hearings testimony related to a motion by Del Monte Properties Co. for modification or recission of the interim order issued May 30 against California-American Water Co.

That order imposed a ban on the connection of water service by the water company to most new developments on the Peninsula until the question of the adequacy of the water supply is resolved.

A study prepared by the State Department of Water Resources for the Monterey County Zone 11 Flood Control and Water Conservation District came to the conclusion there is adequate water to supply projected needs of the area until 1981.

Carmel author seeks assistance

Carmel author Hugh Eames is looking for information on French mystery writer Georges Simenon and his son, both of whom lived in Carmel in 1949-1950.

"Maigret" series of mysteries, sent his son to school at Sunset School in 1949, and it is assumed the son lived with friends in Carmel until his father arrived, Eames said.

Eames is interested in hearing from anyone who remembers or who can provide him with first-hand details of Simenon and his son, for use in a portion of a book on which he is currently working.

Anyone with any relevant information is encouraged to contact Eames at 624-8420.

Concours d'Elegance coming

Pebble Beach will have a first-time look at three cars--each more than half a century old--during the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance, set for Sunday, Aug. 11 at Del Monte Lodge.

The oldest ("three score and five years") is a 1909 Buick 10 Touring, owned by Roger Phillips of Glendale. This car was shown for the first time last June at the Antique Auto Club of America National Spring Meet in Los Angeles where it took first place.

Ellen and Darrell Mitchell of Napa will show their 1923 Rickenbacker Sport Phaeton. Just recently restored, it won a first prize at Silverado and a first at the Antique Show last month in Vallejo. The black and maroon Phaeton originally cost $1,695.

Dr. John Deshaye of Olympia, Wash. will bring his 1919 Crossley 25-30 London Coupe which was a sweepstake winner in Yakima, Wash. and in Canada earlier this year. The burgundy and prairie tan Coupe has a seating capacity of four.

Fund raising held for Guide Dogs for Blind

The annual fund-raising drive of Guide Dogs for the Blind, Inc. will be held in Monterey County during the month of August. Persons who wish to contribute to the non-profit school may send their tax-deductible donations to Guide Dogs for the Blind, Inc., P.O. Box 1200, San Rafael 94902.

The school, now in its 32nd year of operation, provides both the valuable animal and 28-day in-residence training free of charge to qualified blind persons. More than 2,600 men and women have enrolled sice the organization's incorporation in 1942.

Eight residents of Monterey County are presently using dogs from the San Rafael school. They are Elwood Dukes and Eben Whittlesey of Carmel, Henri Ledeboer and Carol Plumb of Pacific Grove, Arthur McBride of Salinas, Charles Read of Monterey, Bonnie Washburn of Seaside and Shirley Woolhiser of Marina. A Monterey woman is scheduled to arrive for training in Class 297, whose members will be officially presented their new canine partners by the 4-H raisers in an informal graduation ceremony on Saturday, Aug. 17, climaxing the 28-day training.

A Guide Dog benefit concert is scheduled for Thursday, September 5, at the Sunset Center in Carmel, featuring a rare appearance on the Peninsula of the renowned George Shearing Trio.

When Carmel smelled of fresh salt air and youth

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Nellie Montague, the first curator of the Carmel Art Association, has been a resident of Carmel since 1933, but she was a frequent visitor before then, coming here for visits since 1909. In this article, she recalls those early and pristine days in Carmel, and the people who made the village what it was.)

By NELLIE MONTAGUE

THE YEAR was 1909, the month June. The train from the Bay area stopped a little short of the Monterey station where "a surrey with fringe on top" waited to carry passengers to the Del Monte Hotel, a short distance away. Then on it went Monterey where old Sam Powers stood ready to pick up passengers to go over the hill to Carmel. He drove a sort of stage-coach, strongly reminiscent of early Wells Fargo days.

The smell of surf and of pines and the view of that never ending sea as one looked from the crest of sandy Ocean Avenue was breathtaking to a young newcomer. Carmel Hill was much higher then than now, twice cut lower during the years.

A walk over springy pine needles and yielding sand led to the beach and the bath house, a joy to us young enthusiasts just free from a college term in Berkeley.

The bath house, long and glass fronted to the sea, held a piano and waxed floor at one end, at the other tables for hot coffee, sandwiches, and other delectables for hungry dippers in the cold sea water. The rear of the building held showers and tub baths, swim suits, and other things for rent.

Outside the bath house, a lifeguard and a long line of rope joined posts that led to a log built float beyond the breakers, a capacious land place for rope walkers and swimmers alike.

This whole establishment, bath house, Pine Inn Hotel, and a workman's boarding house were built by the two promoters of Carmel--Frank Powers, a San Francisco attorney, who looked after affairs from that end, and Frank Devendorf, a dreamer-builder who lived in Carmel and managed matters here.

His hope was to develop a town of family homes, with no hard liquor ever to be allowed, with a statement to that effect written into the town's incorporation, so it was told. Also it may as well be told here that the whole bath house set up was later taken down when a "rowdyish" element began to patronize it. and Carmel beach was then left as pristine as it now is.

But the San Francisco earthquake of 1906 changed somewhat the Devendorf plan and set the early Bohemian tone to much of the town. It had shaken loose the Telegraph Hill writers, painters, actors, and musicians from their long-time habitat. Money was not plentiful among them. Devendorf and Powers were offering lots, even ocean front lots, for $100 each, $5 a month. So the Bohemian bunch came, some with tents.

By 1909 however, a firmly established settlement had developed; two of them in fact. One was known as the George Sterling Hill group, the other was near the waterfront.

The Sterling group was more Bohemian in tone and most of the group had built permanent homes, although a number were occasional dwellers and visitors from San Francisco and Piedmont. Jack London was one. Sinclair Lewis just out of college, known affectionately as Hal, was another. His full name was Henry Sinclair Lewis. He and Bill Benet, brother of Stephen Vincent Benet, lived in a tiny cottage with sad looking laundry on the line.

There was also Xavier Martinez, a Paris educated painter, then a member of the Piedmont group, who lived in Sterling's former home.

Herbert Heron was just then building a house near the Sterlings. His wife, Opal, was Carmel's first and only "flapper," long hair flying loose, bare feet, and an accomplished pianist.

Arnold Genthe from San Francisco had also built a home. He was said to be the first photographer in America to develop color photography. He also had saved from the San Francisco earthquake fire a number of rare Japanese prints.

The Sterlings' Sunday afternoons, a sort of casual open house, consisted of this group as well as a number of budding young poets, musicians, and actors from the San Francisco and Piedmont areas who drifted in and out.

NEW COMERS to the group were not only drunk and dazzled by the whole beauty of Carmel, but also by these Sterling afternoon and evening parties. Held in a clearing near the house, the evening gatherings were lighted by cow skulls containing candles and small lamps.

Also there were evening parties on the beach with the singing anc composing of ever new verses of the "Abalone Song." One of Sterling's contributions was:

"Some live on hope and some on dope
And some on alimony
But this old mut would rather
Cut a slab of Abalone."

The other group was near the waterfront, but not on it. It was a more sedate sort, on the whole. It was composed largely of fiction writers. Grace McGowan Cook and her sister, Alice McGowan wrote mostly stories of the South. Harry Leon Wilson, author of "Ruggles of Red Gap" and "Ma Perkins" stories, lived in the group. The locals were diverted by the news that he had just been divorced by Rose Cecil O'Neal, the designer of the then very popular Kewpie dolls. He had occasional visits from his friend Booth Tarkington, author of "Monsieur Baucaire" and other stories.

Also, there was John Fleming Wilson, a prolific contributor of short stories to The Saturday Evening Post.

One of the streets in that area (which is now Carmelo street, south of Ocean Avenue) was known as professor's row.

Special services to seniors

Monterey Peninsula College drama productions and athletic events have been added to the list of cultural and entertainment activities to which senior citizens will be admitted free or at reduced rates this year.

Golden Age Honorary Membership Cardholders over the age of 65 will be admitted to college-sponsored cultural programs including films, documentary series, concerts, seminars, lectures, forums, and now, drama department productions and collegiate athletic events.

Because many senior citizens are on very limited budgets, said Merrill, they may hesitate to spend money on cultural or educational "extras." To obtain a card, senior citizens should call MPC Community Services at 373-5522.

Haven't you always wanted to own a piece of Dansk©?

Or another piece, if you already have one?

Most people who own Dansk (top of the table designs) want more. Which is understandable. Dansk designs are in museums the world over.

Now the Dansk II shop offers you a special way to own Dansk. At special prices.

From 33 to 66 percent less than you'd ordinarily pay.

We have experimental pieces. Pure Dansk designs that proved too costly to market. We have discontinued pieces, patterns and colors. (You'll wonder why.)

And we have pieces that came out of the kilns which do not conform to Dansk standards. Flaws are invisible, we may add, and do not affect utility (or beauty).

The extraordinarily attractive prices make Dansk II worth a visit the very first day you can.

Which is why we're open every day.

Salt air and youth

The president of Stanford University, David Starr Jordan, and professor Vernon Kellogg, later associated with Herbert Hoover in relief work among homeless Russian children, had summer cottages. There was also Jordon Sproul, who later became president of the University of California.

While Carmel had many sophisticated and cultured early citizens, it had no cook stoves except oil burners, and only oil lamps for lighting.

For going about at night, a lantern constructed from a tin can, usually tomato, with one side cut out from which shone a candle sheltered by an oil-lamp chimney was used. One soon learned to identify acquaintances from the knees down when abroad at night, and there was much going about at night. Impromptu gatherings assembled by word of mouth and helped by a large signboard next to the small post office were common.

The post office was run by Louis Slerin with his photographic supplies store. He occasionally displayed to sympathetic admirers his insect collection.

The last structure on the south side of Ocean Avenue at that time, going toward the beach, was Siveniger's Bakery, located about where DeSmets Bakery now stands. Siveniger was a purveyor of fresh hot croissants for breakfast, and generous chunks of gingerbread for hungry youngsters. Five cents a chunk!

Across the street from Sivenigers was a tiny shop known as Stella's, where forgetters and others could replenish their wardrobes with shoes, stockings, and other simple items. Once a week, a one-legged man known as Joe went over to Holman's store in Pacific Grove to fill orders for Stella. It was said that Joe's spring wagon was also his sleeping quarters. He became a much loved citizen of Carmel and lived to establish its first taxi service which is still known by his name.

One remembered house-warming was at the invitation of Bertha and Perry Newberry. The house to be warmed consisted of a lone fireplace and chimney made of Carmel stone and erected by the hosts of the party.

It was set in a small clearing in the chaparral bushes. It seemed all houses had fireplaces. The owners themselves later erected a cottage around this fireplace, all of stone. It must have been somewhere near what is now Monte Verde and 10th.

An early morning matin of those days was the sing-song chant of Chinese fishermen, from their village along the shore of what is now Pebble Beach. "Flesh Flish, Flesh Flish" aroused many a sleeping house holder who fared forth to choose shining fish laid between wild rhubarb leaves in their baskets hung Chinese fashion from shoulder boards.

Most of the dozen or so vacationing students had their parents with them, and while they roamed the hills over to Monterey, and down the coast for camping parties in inviting canyons and over to Huckleberry Hill to bring home buckets of blueberries made into pies by mothers who also kept the roamers generally nourished. They often prepared beach breakfasts for early morning swimmers.

There were often choice discussion sessions as the young breakfasters lay wagon-spoke fashion around the dying fire.

One adult listening remarked with amiable irony "readjusting the universe, eh?"

But the delight of the young groups was beach parties at night, clustered around a bonfire. One remembered time, with sparks flying to the rising moon, and a young golden voiced actor from England reading poetry, when out of the shadows of the surf line, a voice came singing "On the Road to Mandalay." It was made real by a young horseman coming into the campfire light.

The Forest Theater was functioning then, with a play called "David." In rehersal at that time, the same golden voiced young Welchman had the leading role, and was coached by Garnet Holme who was imported from England by the University of California to coach and direct plays for the then famous Greek theater.

The summer was nearing an end and college beckoned. There were no more beach parties, no more huckleberry jaunts. No more sudden embraces and kisses in the shelter of pines and cypress. What an innocent group compared with the college sophisticates of today!

THE AUTHOR rented this bathing suit in 1909 on her first visit to Carmel.

Carmel Bay underwater park proposal gets a hearing

By TRICIA GORMAN

The debate continued Tuesday night on whether the State Lands Commission should grant a lease to the Department of Parks and Recreation to make Carmel Bay into an underwater park.

Citizen's groups, representatives of state agencies and private citizens centered their debate, which took place at Monterey Peninsula College, on whether the bay should be classified as a park, a reserve, or an ecological reserve.

The distinctions in these classifications, though they appear semantic, affect what will happen to Carmel Bay and, by extension, the Carmel area itself. The area under consideration, less than originally proposed, is the 1,530 acre area from Pescadero Point in the north to Granite Point in the south. (The original proposal was from Cypress to Yankee Point.)

Two agencies, the Department of Parks and Recreation and the Department of Fish and Game, will have jurisdiction over Carmel Bay should the lease be granted by the Lands Commission. Both of these agencies have their classifications of land and water which in turn affect the use and regulation of that area.

Charles Mehlert, assistant superintendent, District 4, Department of Parks and Recreation, defined a state park as an area which consists of "relatively spacious areas of outstanding scenic or natural character, oftentimes containing significant historical, archaeological, ecological, geological, or other such values. The purpose of state parks shall be to preserve outstanding natural, scenic, and cultural values, indigenous aquatic and terrestrial fauna and flora."

He also said improvements in parks for recreational purposes may be made "so long as such improvements involve no major modification of lands, forests or waters."

If a section of land or water is classified as a reserve by the Department of Parks and Recreation, further restrictions are placed on the area. "The purpose of a natural reserve," according to the department, "shall be to preserve such features as rare or endangered plant and animal species and their supporting ecosystems," and any such ecosystem which is considered rare and or unique. A reserve would permit "habitat manipulation" only in the case of scientific research.

Ralph Buchsbaum of Pacific Grove, well-known biologist and author of "Animals Without Backbones," offered to explain the distinction in layman's terms. "In a park you can take things away. In a reserve, it's look but don't touch."

A further distinction can be made by using the Fish and Game classification, "ecological reserve," which ispresently used with regard to the waters surrounding Point Lobos. Legally, the Parks and Recreation Department only has jurisdiction over land, in this case, the bottom of the sea.

The Department of Fish and Games has jurisdiction over the creatures in the water. An area could be defined as a reserve, an area in which nothing is to be removed, and yet sportsmen could still scuba dive and sporting activities could continue. In an ecological reserve, all such activity would be prohibited.

All involved, whether they hope Carmel Bay becomes designated as a park or a reserve, claim to have the ecology of the area in mind.

To those who support the park designation, angle and spear fishing, diving, underwater photography, sailing and other recreational activities would not endanger the environment. To those who want the area defined as a reserve such activity would bring in more tourists and more cars, and facilitate the building of parking lots, toilet facilities and changing rooms. The total effect of such an influx, the pro-reserve contingent feels would be detrimental to the environment.

Those who spoke in favor of an underwater park being created included the Department of Parks and Recreation; the Department of Fish and Games; the Central California Council of Diving Clubs, Inc., represented at the meeting by Stephen Lawler; and Tom Thompson, an assistant professor at San Jose State University who has worked with the Moss Landing Marine Laboratory and who is also a scuba diving instructor with YMCA.

Those favoring the reserve classification were the Sierra Club, represented by Kenneth Wood of Carmel; Lloyd Austin, a University of California zoologist; and the Carmel Highlands Association, Inc., represented by John F. Higgins, Jr.

Many expressed concern that a full environmental impact report be made to determine the effect on the area of whichever classification is chosen. Those wishing further study were the Council of Monterey Bay, Inc., represented by Sidney Brooks; Bob Spear; Charles Kramer of the Central Coast Regional Coastal Commission; Rod Holmgren of Carmel; and Steve Johnson.

Kenneth Wood, representing the Sierra Club, Ventana Chapter, said his group is opposed to the underwater park classification and that the Lobos area and the Carmel Bay should be made into a "complete shore and marine reserve." He indicated they wanted to save the area from over-use and deterioration, a deluge of visitors, vehicles on the beach, scuba diving, spear fishing, docks, glass bottom boats, parking lots, toilet facilities, changing rooms and kelp cutting.

John Higgins of the Carmel Highlands Association shared Wood's fears. Higgins had reservations about the park status after hearing William Mott speak at a recent International Conference on Underwater Parks and Reserves. At that meeting Mott suggested that interpretive devices might be installed in underwater parks.

Higgins said he learned that interpretive devices were such things as underwater trails, glass-bottomed boats, underwater television camera, vessels with submerged viewing ports, submerged observation galleries, submerged vehicles that are free running or confined to a track and underwater observation towers. On land, interpretive activities might include illustrated talks, movies, museum exhibits, and printed material.

Don Kirk of the Carmel Sanitary District expressed hopes that the district's right not be taken away if the area is made into a park. If Carmel Bay is made into a park then a third agency which has jurisdiction over the area, the State Water Resources Control Board, could possible enter their own classification: Area of Special Biological Significance (ASBS).

An ASBS classification implies that sewage disposals would have to be phased out over an unspecified period of years, according to Lee Otter of the Central Coast division of the Coastal Committee.

At present the Carmel Sanitary District has sewage outfall in the bay. If the area became an ASBS (which would probably happen if it became designated as a park), it would have to go to some other means of effluent disposal. One alternative which has been suggested is the use of the eastern portion of the Odello land for a land disposal plant.

Jim Trout of the Lands Commission closed the discussion with the announcement that his agency would make its decision whether Carmel Bay should become a park or reserve sometime in October or November. He said a public meeting would then be held in Sacramento.

Obituaries

HERREID

Private services have been held at Mission Mortuary for Florence Weed Herreid who died Sunday at Carmel Convalescent Hospital after a period of failing health.

A resident of the Peninsula for the last 10 years, she lived at Hacienda Carmel. Mrs. Herreid was born in 1898 in Spokane, Wash. and was widowed for many years, supporting herself as a clerk in the public school system.

She is survived by her son, Gordon Herreid of Fairbanks, Alaska.

Churchill

Arrangements have been made at the Paul Mortuary for Mrs. Leila McKibben Churchill who died Aug. 1 at the Carmel Inn.

She had lived at the inn since January and had previously resided on Carmelo street in Carmel. A native of Cincinnati, she was born in 1888.

After completion of her master's degree in English at the University of California, Berkeley, she taught for five years at the Marlboro School for Girls in Los Angeles.

While living in Portland, Ore., she was the first president of the Century CLub for Women and was instrumental in establishing the West Slope Public Library there.

In 1969 she moved to Carmel with her husband, the late Vernon R. Churchill, who died in 1970. He had retired as chairman of the board of Churchill Tours, Inc., a Pacific Northwest agency which he founded in 1954.

She was a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma, the League of American Pen Women, The Daughters of the American Revolution, the Mayflower Society, and the Carmel Presbyterian Church.

She is survived by her daughter, Mrs. Emory S. Adams Jr. of Carmel and a grandson.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Any individual, firm or agency who plans to build or place a structure in, on, under, or over the navigable water of the United States must first obtain a permit from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. Such permits are also required for any dredging, filling, or dredge disposal in navigable waters. Regulations governing the administrative procedures on permits for activities in navigable or ocean waters were published in the Federal Register on April 3, 1974 as 33 CFR 209.120.

Navigable waters are any waters which are, have been, or can be used for commercial or navigation purposes. Federal permit authority extends over the entire surface of such a water body. Thus, any work in areas presently or formerly subject to tidal action (below the plane of mean higher high water, including unfilled areas behind dikes) or below the ordinary high water mark of rivers and streams may require a Corps permit.

The Federal Corps of Engineers permit is required in addition to any State or local permits. Private ownership of land under or beside the water has no effect on the requirement. If work is done in navigable waters as described above without a permit from the Corps, civil or criminal actions (including removal) can be instituted pursuant to 33 U.S. Code Secs. 406, 407, and 1319. Any questions regarding permits for work in navigable waters may be directed to the Regulatory Functions Branch, San Francisco District, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, 100 McAllister Street, San Francisco 94102, telephone: (415) 556-5178 or 556-5489.

2 ACRES, RANCHO RIO VISTA, $35,000

All it takes is Minor Subdivision action to have two building sites. This property has been annexed to the Carmel Sanitary District, so as well as getting an excellent buy, you'll save the added cost and inconvenience of a septic tank.

A 2-BEDROOM JEWEL ALMOST IN TOWN

Here's a delightful home with two baths and a dining area, located just south of 8th Avenue quite near town. One large bedroom and bath are separate from the rest of the house and can be rented if income is desired. The lot is small, and we don't think you can find an easier maintenance situation without buying a condominium. Fairly priced at $62,500.

SOMETHING SPECIAL FOR ONLY $54,900

A delightful, 2 bedroom, 1 bath JEWEL, completely redecorated with the taste and flair that takes it above and beyond the "Carmel Charmer" category. Enter through a brick patio into a sparkling white living room, dramatically set off with a teak-stained floor and Carmel stone fireplace. Thoughtful decorator appointments throughout include shuttered windows, expansive use of mirrors, colorful bathroom wallpaper and a newly-built rear deck off one of the bedrooms for secluded afternoon sunning. You'll love the cheerful kitchen with all the electric goodies including a glass top stove with self-cleaning oven, and an adjacent laundry room. Forced air heating throughout.

OCEAN FRONT HOME - $275,000

A gorgeous 4 bedroom home, with heated and filtered swim pool with only a sandbeach between you and the Pacific Ocean. A beautifully designed and built home, of about 4,000 square feet, seasoned for about 7 years but in new condition. there are 4 baths, a large recreation room, and many, many estras. Located about a mile south of Carmel.

COMMERCIAL LOT IN MONTEREY RENEWAL AREA $80.000

This L-shaped, 10,000-sq. ft. parcel of land is adjacent to the Merritt Adobe at 386 Pacific Street. It has 50' frontage on Pacific, and is 104' across the back. It's in the Custom House Redevelopment Area and has an excellent potential for development. $80,000 and seller will consider terms and-or trade.

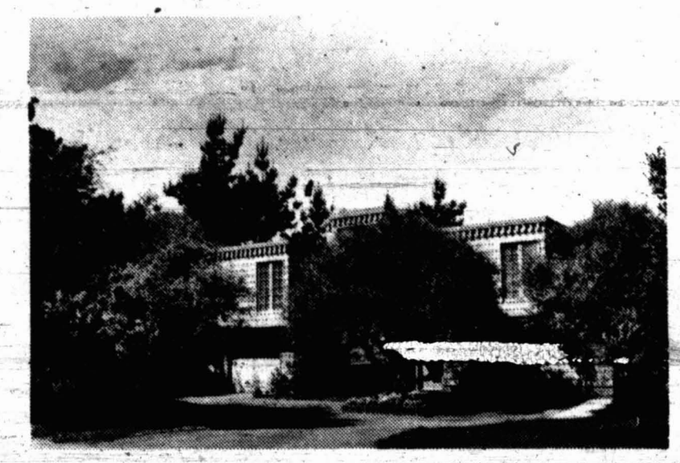
Carmel:

Rustic Contemporary



What's a rustic contemporary? It is a crisp, modern design executed in natural materials to create a unique family home in Carmel's sunny executive area.

Here is the quiet dining room of this convenient family home. There's also breakfast room in the wonderful kitchen. (Notice the polished plank floors.)

The stunning windows, such as this living room corner, are only one of the many exciting features of this interesting 3 bedroom, 2½ bath home. Professional landscaping was done with an eye to adding a pool later. Good location for all schools and shopping. If you like creative concepts in architecture, and still have a traditional streak as to building materials and your way of life, we know you will love this home. It's located on about three-quarters of an acre and the price is just $135,000.

Thirty years ago we opened the door to the Derek Rayne, Ltd., Men's Shop in Carmel and today, the same location and the same ownership. We have watched and helped the Monterey Peninsula grow and we have grown along with it. An outstanding Ladies Shop and a Country Shop for ladies casual wear have been added. People from the Peninsula, in fact from all over the country, including many well known celebrities, have shopped with us constantly during these 30 years. Outstanding qualities, elegant fabrics and accessories, and traditional styling that is good for more than just one season have been out constant effort.

Come in and visit us this week. We know some of you have been our customers for a long time but with changes in personnel, perhaps, you may like to know our names at this time. Here is a current list of the people employed in our organization:
